Inside the MonKeyhouse

Lars needs women. But he'll settle for Transformers.

Tonight's Episode: This Ain't About Money, Folks!

I'm the Toyfare price guide manager, and I'm probably the most unspeculative person on Earth.

I say this with no shame, but it usually causes some surprise. As the guy who monitors the toy economy for Toyfare, I'm expected to be a brazen-speculator mainly concerned with buying low and selling high. And it just ain't so.

Speculators buy toys for profit. Collectors buy toys to sit around. Both are influencing kids, who are supposed to play with the toys, not leave their action figures in the blister packs sitting pristine and pretty—and unsold by mortal hands. Whether the kids have a misguided sense that the toys will be worth something—or are just copying adults out of habit—it's a nutty idea.

Toy companies are partly to blame for this. The 1980s—the decade when I grew up—were far from perfect, but at least you could play with the toys a heck of a lot more.

We had Star Wars, with figures I maimed out in the yard, laughing as my dog playfully chewed on a Stormtrooper. There was also the 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joe line, equipped with enough buzzsaws, rifles and flamethrowers to stock a horrorfest. Transformers was probably the best, because there were so many levels of play. You'd start with just a few cars and planes-turned-robot fighters, then launch into whole teams that merged into colossal robots! It was a marketing play, but I fell for it without hesitation.

I'd spend hours meticulously bottling the toys, having bigger and more grandiose conflicts—with it, Lars Pearson, as the ultimate Norwegian commander!

Which is why if I were a kid today, I'd be very depressed.

There's simply not enough to play with. Consider the Batman: Total Justice line. Looks great—but a total dud for kids. How can you have a good brawl? The only widely distributed knives were Despero and Darkseid, with his "Omega Capture Claw," which looks deadly enough to maybe crack a few walnuts.

Star Trek's even more hopeless. After all, the toys feature such high-excitement accessories as Bithium Crystals and Tribbles, whose main offensive merit is that they breed like rabbits on steroids—dangerous enough to smother you, maybe. Star Wars still gives a good shoot-out, but too many kids are taught to worry about crap like what kind of button RS-D4's rocket launcher has—the reg'lar one or the collectible one. To that I say, "Bah!"

As the comic book industry proved, a collector's market such as this is risky, because it typically can't sustain itself. Profit-starved speculators don't see big price hikes, so they bail. And that's partly good, because toys should not be collected for money.

But what the heck. I saw a kid in Toys R Us yesterday giggling as he pitched a collectible Princess Leia and snatched up a more mass-produced Boba Fett—maybe, just maybe, 'cause he's fun.

So maybe, God bless, there's hope for us yet.

CASUALTIES OF WAR

Every darn time I think I can't possibly fit any more death and destruction into this here letters column, another piece of raging correspondence crammed with gratuitous violence shows up in my mailbox. And that's just peachy. Conflict, baby.

When I started writing "FanFare," I thought it'd be a wonderful forum to resolve conflicts within the toy collecting community. Couldn't have been more wrong. "FanFare" isn't the peace summit, it's the battlefield.

Which is actually kinda cool. Violence puts butts in the seats. Now if we could only work some nudity into the mix.

But before we get started with this month's collection of violence and viciousness, we'll give the floor to Playmates Star Trek Brand Manager Chris Overley, who wanted to clarify a coupla things. Take it away, you Gorn Guru, you....

Dear ToyFare,

I just wanted to make a quick addition to my comments in ToyFare #4's Star Trek feature ["Enterprising Minds Want to Know"].

To make a further promise to Trek fans, I want to emphasize that we are not reducing articulation in necessary points and making our figures unposable. We are redecorating the figures to make them more realistic and at the same time creating new, interesting poses with articulation, and it is sometimes necessary to reduce one to three points of articulation within the whole figure.

We listen very closely to our fans and we will give them what is necessary to pose their figures for display. The articulations we have eliminated in favor of more elaborate deco have been in mid-thigh or mid-bicep, not the more essential articulations. As we lower the number of pieces per figure, we can get better decoration. None of our figures have less articulation than figures we have produced in the past.

Chris Overley
Playmates

Star Trek Brand Manager

Thanks, Chris! Now onto our regularly scheduled mayhem....

Dear FanFare,

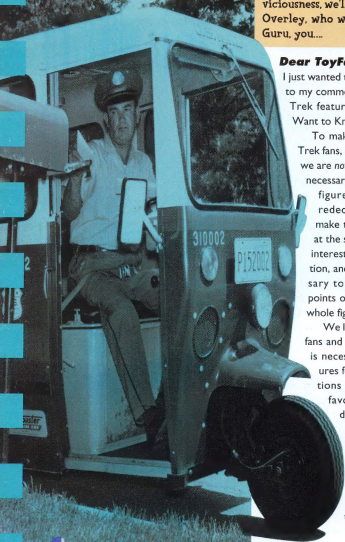

I've been following the saga of the "greedy toy mongers" vs. angry collectors. I wage my own war with the toy mongers. I work at a Toys R Us, and when the crazies beat down the door at 9 a.m. looking for certain assortments, I tell them we don't have them. Then I put out the figures later in the afternoon so the kids can get first crack at them.

I've also mutilated packaging on "rare" figures. Toy mongers don't want the damaged ones, but the kids don't care. They open them anyway. Don't think I'm cold-hearted; I do save some for the serious collectors. However, if a kid asked me for it I'd give it to him/her in a second.

So take heart, toy collectors. The greedy toy mongers don't always win.

Kristyn Surprenant
Chicago, IL

Wanna see a funny spit-take? Make sure you're in the vicinity when Kristyn's boss settles back with a cup of coffee to read this issue. "What's this? Our very own Kristyn wrote to ToyFare! That's just...SSS-BBBTTT! Blargh! Mutilating packages?"

Kristyn's intentions are certainly noble. Toys, much like Trix, are for kids. But that gal sure has a lot to learn about holding down a steady job.

And now, a word from Kristyn's arch-enemies:

Dear ToyFare,

In response to "anti-monger" letters:

We hate being labeled "greedy toy mongers." We don't believe taking the effort to hunt, find and buy an action figure gives you the right to put us down. We could call you crybabies, lazy bums and slobbs that sit on your butts watching TV, but we are more mature than that.

Here are two sayings to get you acquainted with our ideals: "First come, first serve" and "If it is our hunt, it is our kill."

Get this through your head: We are not screwing you out of your toy satisfaction. If we choose to sell an action figure at an auction, then we are only being intelligent and taking advantage of a system which allows us to buy a retail figure and make a profit.

Think about this carefully. You have an enormous grudge against us, and you do not even see the truth—that you are collectors the same as we. You want the same hard-to-find figures we look for, but you get upset at us because:

- 1) We are faster than you.
- 2) We know when and where to go.
- 3) You have quick tempers.

And you want us to apologize to you and quit our hobby just because we have an edge? Get a clue! In the words of the famous Imperial Jawas, "Don't start some and you won't get none."

David Columbo
Gabriel Miranda
Palm Beach Gardens, FL

There's the point. Here's the counterpoint:

Hey! It's Pen Pals!

Find a trenchmate on the great toy battlefield! Send your name, address, age, gender and three favorite toy lines or figures to: Pen Pals, c/o the "ToyFare" address on page 7. Note: Please write your age on the envelope. If you want your Internet address listed instead, please post your info in our Kizad World ToyFare forum on America Online (Keyword: Kizad) or e-mail us your info at ToyFare@aol.com. Remember that "My Buddy" doll? He looked like Chuckie!

Dear ToyFare,

Collectors and "greedy toy mongers" make me sick. If I were ever to see a grown man snatch a toy from a 10-year-old, I'd beat him to the ground with one of those extendible lightsabers and then run over him in one of those motorized Power Wheels Batmobile cars.

Kids will open up their toys, play with them and possibly even treasure them like I did my Star Wars toys as a child. Any person who would deprive a child of that enjoyment for a quick buck should have their genitals dipped in honey and have them feasted upon by a thousand fleas from Santa's reindeer while the jolly old fat man gives him an enema with an umbrella.

Ryan Foley
Adair, OK

There's a mental image I won't soon be shaking. Thanks a lot.

En Sabah Hulk...

...or Dr. Bruce Pocy?

Dear ToyFare,

Is it just me or does Apocalypse Rising from Toy Biz's X-Men: Onslaught line bear an uncanny resemblance to the Smart Hulk from the Hulk: Transformations line?

Christian Sahner
Maplewood, NJ

It does indeed. We asked Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcon just what's goin' on with those amazingly similar sculpt, and he seemed surprised we were even askin'. "It's the same body," he said. "It was [done] during Toy Fair [the industry's big annual shindig] and we needed a lot of things done in a short amount of time." Falcon said to speed the process, Digger Mesch, who sculpted both Pocy and the Hulk, used the same basic sculpt. "It's not the first time that it's happened for us or other toy companies," Falcon said. "A great deal of the Spider-Man figures are like that. It's a way to save time."

ToyFare Buddies,

What's the deal with all the Star Wars variants? Long sabers, short sabers, open hand, closed hand, orange cards, green cards, brown vests, no holograms, yadda, yadda. Is this a quality control problem or Kenner's unnecessary attempt at creating a demand for collectors and fans? Around here, new Star Wars lines are gobbled up faster than a little toady in Jabba's palace. It should be obvious to Kenner that a healthy demand already exists. If the variants are intentional, there is really no need to continue producing them. It's hard enough finding the short-packed figure without having to find at least three more (orange-carded and no-hologram variants).

Gabriel Chavarria
Fontana, CA

For as variant-crazy as the Star Wars: Power of the Force line has become, it's never really been on purpose. The lengths on early POTF lightsabers were ridiculously long, and the mistake was corrected in mid-production.

The POTF cards were changed in 1997 to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the first "Star Wars" film. In the real world, both moves seem plausible and sincere. In the toy world, variants ahoy, all hands on deck and every collector for himself! Or herself. The point is, we're talking about a market obsessed with variants for their value and collectibility. If Kenner came out with a thicker, stronger backing card or a bigger peghole, those would be considered variants, too. The solution? Join the real world, collect the toys you like and throw the packages away.

Dear ToyFare People,

1) Why don't you have Sailor Moon toys in your price guide?

Survey Says...

TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

What's an action figure without an action feature? Ever since G.I. Joe's Kung Fu Grip, action features have played an integral role in the world of action figures. Whether it's flippin', floppin' Beast or Electronic F/X R2-D2, action features just get cooler and cooler. But which action figure "extra" is the best of the best? We asked our vast Legion of AOL Heroes that very question...

Which action feature is YOUR favorite?

- a) Light-up action
- b) Punching/fighting action
- c) Snap-on gear
- d) Missile-firing action
- e) Transforming action
- f) Sound chips
- g) Other (be specific!)

Wow, how about that? Finally, a poll that wasn't a complete and utter blowout. Results seemed pretty evenly matched, with sound chips coming up with the short end of the stick.

But if we dare to venture inside the numbers, so to speak, there was definitely a trend. Most of the votes racked up in the "other" category were from folks whose favorite action feature was NO action feature. "If a toy is cool enough, it doesn't NEED an action feature," one respondent remarked. Add that to the large number of readers who voted for snap-on features with the comment, "At least you can take it off and throw it away," and it appears we've struck upon an unexpected result: there're lots and lots of collectors out there who aren't keen on action features at all.

Other trends in the "other" category were fans of heavy articulation, and we received more than one vote for the Hari Kari "naked" feature. We shoulda guessed.

HEY! more reader mail...

- 2) Why aren't WildC.A.T.s toys worth more than 12 bucks?
- 3) Torn, do you think we could be related?

Cole Root
Centralia, IL

1) You're not the first person to ask that question, believe me. The short answer is that Bandai's Sailor Moon toys were closer to fashion dolls, like Barbie, than action figures. There's a case to be made to the contrary, however, and if the reader demand for Serena and pals to enter the hallowed halls of the ToyFare price guide is strong enough, we'll put 'em in.

2) Good question. Those were some sharp-lookin' toys. There just doesn't seem to be much desire for them these days. Give it time.

3) Oh, hey, Cole! I haven't seen you since the family reunion back in '90. You still living in the back seat of your Gremlin?

Dear ToyFare,

It's going to be a little difficult to come up with your special figure offers once a month, so I thought I'd give y'all some suggestions. Here's my Top Ten Wish List for ToyFare specialty figures:

1) The Wonder Twins. Now Darkseid can beat the "Made in Tokyo" etching off these two. And for kicks, throw in that nitwit monkey.

9) Bob Saget, Action Man.

8) Pamela Anderson Lee. Need I say more?

7) Spider-Man: The Movie action figure. This figure would be in preproduction for years with rumors of top people working on it.

6) The Ticket Master. Overcharge superheroes on any and all concerts from Yanni to the Wallflowers.

5) Manimal. Woo-hoo!

4) Yoda with Jedi Armor. Sure, it wasn't ever in the movies, but they made that lame "Luke Skywalker on the desert skiff" thingie.

3) Jesus Christ, Super Figure. Comes with a goblet of water which turns into wine. Leper optional.

2) Hoojibs. You know, those little fuzzy mind-reading bastard rabbits from the Marvel Star Wars comics. They'd be great for BB gun target practice.

1) Mary Jane in Fresh-Out-of-the-

Shower Towel Wrap. With removable hair turban for "drying action"! Slave Leia is nothing compared to this much-clamored-for figure.

David J. Humphreys Jr.
syrep@aol.com

"Manimal" was a great show and all, but even as a kid I was skeptical. Let's get this straight: the guy could turn into ANY animal at all, right? But he only ever turned into a hawk, a Kitty and a panther. Or whatever. "Manimal" was my introduction to the term "low-budget dreck." Why not take out the crooks as a tyrannosaurus rex or a bull elephant? Why not combine animals—a lightning-fast cheetah with a great white shark head and scorpion tail? C'mon! Cheetasharkion would've slain evil with gory abandon.

And hey! We're fond of the Hoojibs around here.

Hola ToyFare,

I have a couple of questions for you.

1) I have always called a Tusken Raider's weapon a gaffi stick, but on the Power of the Force packaging it's called a gaderffii stick. What's it really called?

2) Last week I bought a Star Wars: Power of the Force Death Star Gunner that read "Collection 3" on the card. Is there a Death Star Gunner in Collection 3 or is this an error?

3) I have an invention: arm socks! I take different-colored soccer socks and cut off the foot to my arm length! They're ultra-spiffy and go with anything. If you guys could send me your arm lengths and your favorite colors, I could make some for you! What do you say?

4) Could you send me a picture of Gareb's head? I want to get it carved in silver and inlaid in my bass.

5) I have an Iceman II with a loose left elbow. Is there any way to tighten these joints?

Adam Clasen
Tampa, FL

1) According to numerous "Star Wars" texts, "gaderffii" is the proper name of the weapon. "Gaffi" is accepted slang.

2) The Death Star Gunner hoped ship from Collection 1 to Collection 3 when Kenner recently reorganized its collection numbers (Collection 1 is mostly heroes, Collection 2 is mostly aliens and droids, and Collection 3 is mostly baddies). There are fewer Collection 3 Death Star Gunners than Collection 1 Gunners, but since of DSG will be in Collection 3 for the foreseeable future, that ratio could even out.

4) Gareb's head appears monthly in Wizard: The Comics Magazine's "From the Top" column. Go nuts. And send us a picture of that bass when it's done.

5) Our resident customizin' Kingpin, Chris Spaseff, had a couple different solutions. "Sometimes those joints just droop," he said. "You can drill out the joint, replace it with a metal rod and cap the ends with Milliput. Or you can simply replace the rivet with a slightly larger one. Finding the right size can be tricky, but your local hardware store should have plenty to choose from in both metal and plastic."

If you walked around in an outfit like that, you'd need a nip o' courage too.

Ahh, the old "intentionally misconstrue a poorly worded question" gambit. That must mean this go-round has come sputtering to its conclusion.

See ya next month!

ToyFare NEWS

THE FORCE REMAINS WITH HASBRO AND GALOOB

The Empire strikes back, again.

Luke Skywalker will remain in all his 3 3/4-inch Kenner glory, and X-Wing Micro Machines will continue to fight Micro Machines TIE Fighters for the foreseeable future. That's the word from Lucasfilm, which recently announced it had entered into exclusive, worldwide license agreements with both Hasbro (Kenner's parent company) and Galoob to produce Star Wars toys and other products for the next three Star Wars "Prequel" movies, along with original toys, vehicles and playsets based on other Star Wars properties, into the next century.

original Star Wars Trilogy as well as those based on new works set at the same time as the original three movies.

Similarly, Galoob's license, which extends the relationship that started in 1992, grants the company the right to produce Star Wars Prequel-based Micro Machines, Micro Machines playsets, and miniature accessories based on new vehicles, characters and locations in the Prequels. Like the deal with Hasbro, Galoob's arrangement with Lucasfilm includes the rights to produce toys based on the original Star Wars Trilogy.

"It's extraordinary for a company of Galoob's size to be given

Neither company would disclose specific terms of the deals, such as the length of the agreements, but estimates of the companies' revenues due to Star Wars products over the term of the agreements put the figure in the billions of dollars. Also, both companies negotiated separate agreements that give them both long-term preferential negotiation rights from Lucasfilm for the same categories of toys based on future upcoming Lucasfilm movies, such as further Indiana Jones films, or more fantasy-based films such as 1988's "Willow," which was written by George Lucas and produced by Lucasfilm.

For Hasbro, the deal continues Kenner's 20-year relationship with Lucasfilm that began with action figures for "Star Wars" in 1977. Along with core action figures through its Kenner division, the agreement with Hasbro includes electronic hand-held games, die-cast vehicles, and creative play products aimed at younger audiences. "This agreement gives Hasbro the wonderful opportunity to develop the Star Wars brand over a broad range of categories well into the next millennium," Hasbro CEO Alan Hassenfeld said. "This new arrangement allows us to build and expand upon a successful and special relationship with Lucasfilm that has spanned more than 20 years."

Included in the agreement with Hasbro is the right to continue to make toys based on characters, ships and events of the

an opportunity so large," said Mark Goldman, president and CEO of Galoob. "These arrangements will fundamentally change Galoob, creating a stability and an assured access to growth previously unavailable to us."

In further Star Wars licensee news, Ballantine Books announced that it has retained the rights to publish Star Wars novels through its Del Rey imprint, continuing its 20-year relationship with Lucasfilm. The new arrangement will allow Del Rey to publish novelizations of the three new Star Wars films, as well as non-fiction books based on the new trilogy and spin-off novels set in the same time period as the Prequels, much like "Shadows of the Empire," Ballantine's highly successful "bridge" book set between "Empire" and "Jedi" that had its own toy tie-ins.

This licensing news follows the announcement by Lucasfilm and Dark Horse Comics that Dark Horse has retained the rights to produce the official comic book adaptations of the Star Wars Prequels, as well as original comics set in the original Star Wars time period and the Prequel time frame.

Lucasfilm president Gordon Radley had nothing but good things to say about the deals, expressing an eagerness to work with all licensees on Star Wars properties for many years to come. All licensees will undoubtedly have new products on store shelves by May 1999, when the first Star Wars Prequel is set for release. ■ Matthew Brady

THE DARK KNIGHT RETURNS IN 1998!

To the Batcave!

While 1997's "Batman & Robin" theatrical release—the fourth film in the popular franchise—enjoyed less-than-spectacular domestic box office and critical success, Kenner's action figure adaptations of the Dark Knight Detective are buoyed by strong collector and mass-market interest. In 1998, Kenner has no less than four different Batman segments ready to hit toy shelves, featuring all-new versions of the Caped Crusader, his crimefighting allies and colorful rogues gallery.

Fueled by all-new episodes of the "The New

The Mad Hatter (w/ sidekick robot), Detective Batman (mistakenly minus his Bat-emblem), Crime Solver Nightwing and Crime Fighter Robin make up Kenner's new animated Batman assortments.

The all-new animated Batmobile features a firing weapon under the hood (inset).

DC's Creeper joins Batman in 1998!

Batman Die-Cast Multi-Pack

Batman Animated Die-Cast Assortment

Batman Adventures" animated series, seen weekdays and Saturdays in tandem with the new "Superman" cartoon series on Kids WB, Kenner reinvigorates its animation-based segment with the inevitable Bat-variants, these play-enhanced versions of Batman: Silver Defender Batman, Detective Batman, Jet Wing Batman, Road Rocket Batman and Undercover Bruce Wayne, all reflecting the new animated episodes' depiction of Batman.

Joining Batman in his crusade against crime is Kenner's new Seawing Nightwing (name tentative), Crime Solver Nightwing, Battle Shield Nightwing and Crime Fighter Robin, a more diminutive, Tim Drake version of the boy wonder.

Batman vs. Two-Face promises a villain for the hero, as does the promised release of the first Mad Hatter action figure and brand new Wild Card Joker.

But perhaps the best news—certain to add grist to the rumor mill of more DC characters to follow—is Kenner's planned action figure version of the Creeper, expected to guest-star on the animated series more than once, and currently the headliner of an all-new DC Comics series by writer Len Kaminski and artist Shawn Martinbrough.

The animated Joker's Toxic Lab and Gotham City Bank playsets feature tons of action features.

Kenner's 1998 Batman & Robin movie figures will sport Covert Strike Copes with weapons and accessories.

Expect to see the first of these figures to begin showing up in February 1998, with more to come through the summer.

And it wouldn't be Batman without an all-new Batmobile (a two-seater this time, with a firing weapon concealed under a rotating hood) and Batplane, also slated for 1998, in addition to two playsets: Joker's Toxic Lab and Gotham City Bank, re-decoed playsets once slated for Kenner's animated Superman line.

Finally, the animated series-based figures will also be rendered in die-cast form with separate releases of the Batwing, Batboat, Batmobile, Batgirl on the Batcycle, Batman & Robin and the Penguin & Joker. A Batman Die-Cast Multi-Pack will feature all the vehicles and Batgirl with her Batcycle, as well as exclusive "fighting stance" Batman figure.

Over in the "Elseworlds"-inspired Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight segment, Kenner will unveil its fourth wave with Lava Fury Batman and Batgirl in August 1998, with Dark Knight Batman (no relation to the Frank Miller series) and Clayface in October. November will see the release of the Collector Series Bob Kane Batman—a must-have for discriminating Bat-collectors. Meanwhile, Kenner will continue to support its "Batman & Robin" movie-inspired toys with standard and deluxe figures sporting Covert Strike Capes with weapons and accessories. Already slated are Ambush Attack Batman, Talon Strike Robin, Wing Blast Robin, Aerial Combat Batman, Aerial Defender Robin, Thermal Cape Batman, Battle Board Batman, a Batman vs. Mr. Freeze two-pack, a re-decoed Batman & Robin two-pack, Transforming Mr. Freeze, Drone Cape Robin, Jet Pack Mr. Freeze, Laser Cape Batman, Photon Chopper Batman, Sky Assault Batman (name tentative) and a re-decoed Batman (name TBD).

On the vehicle front, look for all-new Batman & Robin Mini-Vehicles equipped with long-range foam firepower launchers and, last, but not least, the Jet Blade Vehicle (which separates into two crime-fighting vehicles).

Finally, Kenner heads back to school next September with a brand new Batman segment, with several versions of the hero and his roster of foes. At press time, the name of this segment, in addition to the figures in the assortment, was still under wraps. But this just may be the segment Kenner hinted would make DC fans very happy. We'll keep you abreast of this and all other Bat-news in the coming months! ■ The ToyFare Staff

TOY BIZ UNLEASHES 1998 MARVEL LINEUP!

Toy Biz's 1998 lineup is a dynamic who's who of the most requested Marvel Comics characters.

One thing's for sure in 1998: Toy Biz has both the serious action figure collector and the kid at heart in mind with its latest Marvel lineups.

More than its cash-cow staple of mutant X-Men (for an in-depth look at Toy Biz's 1998 X-offerings, turn to page 36), Toy Biz is launching all-new collector-friendly assortments, in addition to keeping Spider-mania alive with a variety of new characters.

With The Vault, the Biz is offering its first villains-only assortment, lining up three fan-favorite nasties—Ultron, Typhoid Mary and Stegron the Dinosaur Man—for collectors.

"The Vault is the first action figure assortment that's strictly villains," said Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcon. "Each of the characters will also have their own unique restraint devices totally designed for that particular character. Typhoid Mary has a real cloth straitjacket and shackles for her feet."

Also slated for 1998 release is Marvel's Most Wanted, an assortment where Toy Biz takes fan interest to heart, offering up a cadre of heroes fans have been just begging to see. Who's up first? Do the names X-Man and Blink ring a bell?

"We get Internet and fan-mail requests from all over the place, from the X-Men to Spidey and the Avengers. Marvel's Most Wanted is a way to pick the best of the best, the most highly requested characters, and put them in their own assortment," said Falcon, who revealed that ToyFare just may have had something to do with the choice for the assortment's third character.

"Based on the requests we got after [ToyFare] published its story ("Bench-warmers," a feature spotlighting Toy Biz's unproduced figures in ToyFare #2), we might possibly do Hemingway," Falcon revealed.

For the serious Marvel collector, whose task is made easier by Toy Biz's knack for serving up even the most obscure Marvel Comics characters, the Biz bolsters its Spidey assortments next year (whose names are still under wraps at press time) with such heroes and villains as Sandman, Silver Sable, Jack O'Lantern, the Red Skull, Madame Web and brand-new likenesses of Carnage and Hobgoblin, in addition to mining Spidey comics for such concepts as ol' Web-Head in his insulated Electro-battling suit, designed by comics and toy artist Steve Skroce!

"As we go forward into 1998, even though the play features are geared toward kids, we want collectors to know that we're going to give them much more of what they really want," Falcon said. ■ Scott Beatty

Electro-Insulated Spidey

A ROSIE BY ANY OTHER NAME

Ever had the urge to tickle Rosie O'Donnell?

Well, just in case, the opportunity will soon be there. Tyco will release a 16-inch plush incarnation of the cheery talk-show host on November 13.

The company's Rosie O'Doll was originally presented to O'Donnell as a birthday gift from Tyco back in March. It was a fitting gift for O'Donnell, who had been instrumental in stoking the Tickle Me Elmo craze in 1996 with frequent on-air mentions of the toy.

O'Donnell accepted Tyco's offer to make more Rosie toys for charity purposes, signing up Kmart and Toys R Us as exclusive retailers for the doll. Ten dollars from the sale of each doll, which will retail for $24.99, will be funneled into O'Donnell's For All Kids Foundation.

Much like Elmo, the Rosie O'Doll will spout blubs of dialogue when her tummy is tickled. A little affection and Rosie laughs or utters authentic

On the left, Tickle Me Rosie. On the right, "Tickle Me and You'll Be Spittin' Teeth for a Month" Rosie.

Rosie-isms (in O'Donnell's real voice, natch) such as "Dreams come true with Rosie," "What a cutie patootie," "Rock on, little ones!" and "Come on, give me a kiss!" with kissing noises.

The toy's production run will be limited to 300,000, and after March 31, 1998, the Rosie O'Doll will cease to be available.

While perhaps not yet as feverishly desired as Tickle Me Elmo, the hunger for Rosie O'Doll is already growing. An October 13 mention by USA Today, on the day the toy was to debut on "The Rosie O'Donnell Show," had rabid Rosie fans camped outside Toys R Us stores to secure pre-order certificates.

"We had about a half-dozen people waiting outside the store when we opened," said one Toys R Us employee. "One woman bought 10 of the pre-order certificates," each going for $10 apiece, she said.

Ten? Now that's a whole lotta Rosie. ■ Tom Root

WEBSITE OF THE MONTH

McFARLANE TOYS

<http://www.spawn.com/spntoys.html>

Lots of toy companies have websites, but this one takes the cake. From soup to nuts, this is one classy site—informative, up-to-date and, best of all, extremely fan-friendly.

According to Chet Jacques, director of McFarlane Toys Collector's Club, the extra effort put into the website has resulted in some serious popularity. "We're in the Playboy range as far as the amount of hits we're getting," Jacques says. "Hundreds of thousands of hits every month." And its popularity will keep on growing—Jacques says a Japanese-language version of the website will go online soon.

What can the Land of the Rising Sun look forward to? Tons of product information, release schedules, scans of quick-loading artwork and plenty of fan feedback. There's a complete list of Spawn toys, including variants, which comes in extra handy for completists. Also, check out the behind-the-scenes peeks at prototypes and the toy-making process.

And for hardcore collectors there's an added bonus—first dibs on Collector's Club merchandise. "The Toy Club stuff goes up on the website first, beating the mailing list stuff by a few weeks," Jacques says. "And Heavenly Fire Angela won't be available until December! So quit asking me!"

Other nifty perks? How about some downloadable Windows 95 "themes"—stuff like Spawn backgrounds, and a Windows "hourglass" icon which scrolls through the first 50 Spawn covers?

All in all, it's a great big heaping helping of McFarlane products, and everything the discriminating Spawn collector could want. Just don't ask Chet about that Heavenly Fire Angela yet. ■ Tom Root

A-HEAD OF HER GENERATION

Fairchild's always been head and shoulders above her teammates.

Now the statuesque Gen¹³ member finally has a three-dimensional cranium. The shoulders, along with the rest of her body, are on the way as WildStorm nears completion of its debut action figure, due to ship in April as a retailer incentive.

"So far I think she's great," said Jeff

Mariotte, WildStorm's vice president of marketing. "I think the head is true to the character and nicely sculpted. People here are excited about it."

The true test was the discerning eyes of J. Scott Campbell, artist on the bulk of the Gen¹³ comic title's run, who gave his thumbs-up on the newly sculpted melon. "If he's happy with it," Mariotte said, "then we all feel good." ■ Tom Root

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

ALIEN RESURRECTION TOYS FIRST HASBRO SIGNATURE SERIES

Set to release this month in conjunction with the big-screen "Alien Resurrection," Hasbro's new Alien Resurrection action figure assortment inaugurates the brand new Hasbro Signature Series. One look at the figures—Ripley, Coll, the Aqua Alien, Alien Warrior and Battle Scar Alien—with vibrant decoes and exciting sculpting, and serious collectors will know that Hasbro definitely has their kind in mind.

"Hasbro really knows what collectors want in action figures and our new Signature Series is devoted to meeting that need," reported Holly Ingram, Hasbro's Manager of Public Relations.

In addition to the standard action figure assortment, the debut Hasbro Signature

Series Alien Resurrection assortments will include two newborn Alien bendable figures from the film, the chestbuster and facehugger, each with realistic body features.

Though Hasbro's future for the line is unrevealed, expect the company to closely examine its existing stable of franchises (Batman, Superman, Star Wars, etc.) for inspiration, in addition to pursuing other requested toys.

"Collectors can look to the Signature Series line to provide the hottest properties that they've always wanted to see, but have not been able to get," Ingram says. "Not only that, but collectors can anticipate the most exquisite, highly detailed and authentic showcase replicas of these properties in the Hasbro Signature Series." ■ The ToyFare Staff

FLATT'S NAKED TRUTH

Must See... Action Figures???

If you've got a sharp eye, you might have caught a familiar-looking prop in the background of NBC's "The Naked Truth" on September 29. Perched atop a lamp on the desk of actor/comedian Chris Elliott's character, Bradley, is a custom Carnage Mego doll made by ace customizer Charlee Flatt, whose work you may remember from the covers of the first two ToyFare specials, ToyFare #1's "Twisted Mego Theatre" and other odd appearances to date.

For Flatt, seeing his work on national television was a unique thrill. "It felt pretty weird," he said "I've been a huge Chris Elliott fan from way back when he was on 'Letterman.' It was cool to have pictures of someone I really like holding something that I made."

Michael Saltzman, executive producer of "Truth," has been a longtime admirer and purchaser of Flatt's custom-made Megos. "I was really impressed by his stuff and contacted him to buy some figures," he recalled. "When I got this job as executive producer, Charlee and I always joked about getting one of his figures on the set. Since Chris' character is sort of the classic fanboy, I thought it would be a perfect opportunity."

But how did Flatt and Saltzman settle on a character like Carnage instead of a more recognizable icon? "Everybody knows about the Superman statue on a character like Carnage instead of a more recognizable icon? "Everybody knows about the Superman statue in the background on 'Seinfeld,'" Flatt explained. "There hasn't been much Marvel representation on TV, so I thought I'd send [Michael] Carnage. And I also happened to have a Carnage figure that someone backed out on."

If you missed out on catching Carnage, don't worry—the figure will be there every week. "I'm honored to be able to display Charlee's work as a part of our set," Saltzman said. "He's absolutely brilliant. He makes all the figures I fantasized about owning as a kid. Anything else that we can do to further expose his work we'll be happy to do." ■ Tom Palmer Jr.

TOY BIZ FOBS: REDUCE, REUSE, RECYCLE

It's déjà vu all over again!

Walk into a Kay-Bee or Wal-Mart these days, and you're apt to find a plethora of new Toy Biz packaging with some strangely familiar action figures inside—all for a price that can't be beat!

They're something called FOBs (which stands for "freight on board," a shipping term), which basically means the return of older Toy Biz figures on new blister cards. And since FOB lines ship directly to retailers from factories overseas, it cuts down on the final price to consumers. "It provides retailers an opportunity to offer figures no longer available at a more affordable cost," said Carlos Lopez, Toy Biz product manager. "And it's a way to offer kids the figures at a cheaper cost than normal."

That means lots of figures previously only available for big bucks on the secondary market are suddenly dirt cheap—three Rogues for $10, anyone?

FOBs are also a way retailers can have a toy line all to themselves; Amazing Heroes ships exclusively to Wal-Mart, for instance, while Marvel Universe lines the racks at Kay-Bee.

Toy Biz will often give figures a new look their second time around. "We'll freshen the figures up sometimes," he said. "For example, if Wolverine appears in a blue space costume in the comic book and a gold space costume in the animated series, we might make a change" in the FOB line.

Retailers will sometimes request certain characters be included their respective FOB lines, but Lopez said the final decision rests with Toy Biz. "We don't use old sculptures we aren't completely happy with," he said. "We also don't want to compete with ourselves," which means recycled characters too similar to figures in new Toy Biz figures are nixed.

It all adds up to lots of diverse product on the shelves for bargain-basement prices—if that ain't a collector's dream, we don't know what is. ■ Tom Root

TOY OF THE MONTH

NOVEMBER'S coolest action figure... THE B'OMARR MONK!

Who: The B'omarr Monk—that creepy-lookin' spider-thingle that skitters across the screen in "Return of the Jedi" and scares the bejeezus out of C-3PO. In case you're curious, that little piece of chewing gum in a fishbowl is actually the brain of a monk that has achieved a complete state of enlightenment.

What: The latest exclusive Star Wars: Power of the Force action figure, the B'omarr Monk, is one of the niftiest Kenner figures to come down the pike recently.

Where: This funky monk is only available through Kenner's Star Wars web-site. Point your browser to <http://hasbro.starwars.com> and follow the links to uncover the ordering instructions. And remember—the offer is limited to 50 figures per household!

When: If you're lucky, you might already have one of these guys. Orders for figures that were placed when the offer first appeared have already started to ship. If you missed out, there's still time. But the monk offer expires on January 31, 1998...so don't sit on your butt!

Why: Even though this creature has a scant few seconds of screen time, you've gotta admit that it's a pretty damn cool-lookin' figure. With its big squishy abdomen, pincer claw and spindly legs, this bad boy is set to cause all sorts of trouble. Kudos to Kenner for its continued efforts to make every Star Wars universe character, no matter how obscure! ■ The ToyFare Staff

COMPANY UPDATES

McFARLANE TOYS

Repaints of Spawn Series B should be in stores now. Here's a quick rundown of all the deco changes and resculpts to look for: Renegade now sports a half-and-half gray paint scheme and carries a spear and war club. Sabre's name has changed to Buffalo and he has a gray color scheme and a brand new tomahawk weapon on his right hand. Grove Digger now has green pants and black boots. The color scheme for Curse of the Spawn has been changed to a red body with a black wash and light tan bones. Gate Keeper now has a powder blue body and all his previously silver parts are now copper. Rotarr's skin has also changed color to a mustard yellow (just like Golden's Bark) and his jumpsuit is now olive green... The McFarlane Toys Collector's Club has announced its latest exclusive for mid-December, a Metallic Red Tiffany sporting red armor and a few resculpted parts. They'll also start giving away the Diamond Comics exclusive Cosmic Angela to customers who order $150 or more. ■

STAR WARS SPECIAL REPORT

Kenner's Star Wars Universe Expands in 1998!

Kenner's Star Wars toy universe just got a little bigger.

Make no mistakes: Where the Force is concerned, the Cincinnati-based Kenner division of the Hasbro Toy Group has even more dynamic action figures and toys in store for Star Wars collectors in 1998, continuing its mega-popular re-launch of the franchise begun in 1995. While Kenner recently acquired expanded worldwide rights (alongside Galoob) to produce toys and games based on the next three Star Wars "Prequel" movies—a deal extending into the next century—the company is forging ahead with its original Trilogy-based line, unveiling new concepts, fan-favorite "wish list" characters and a galaxy full of Jedi toys for merely the first two quarters of 1998.

On the action figure front, Kenner's first quarter Star Wars: Power of the Force 1998 releases will include three new waves, and each figure will come complete with an all-new action slide from the Trilogy. Wave 14 will feature an Ewok two-pack with Wicket and Logray, in addition to the first-ever renderings of Luke's pal Biggs Darklighter and the Mos Eisley Cantina alien Lak Sivrak.

Wave 15 figures will include the long-awaited Darth Vader with Removable Helmet, Ishi Tib (a denizen of Jabba's Palace), the Imperial Captain Piett and bounty hunter Zuckuss.

Meanwhile, Wave 16 figures will sport an all-new likeness of Princess Leia Organa for those dissatisfied with Kenner's 1995 version, in addition to an all-new R2-D2 with Datalink and Periscope, C-3PO with Removable Limbs and Backpack and a much less "beefcaked" Luke Skywalker with Blast Shield Helmet.

Also in the first quarter of 1998, Kenner will continue its Cinema Scene 3-Pack series with Final Showdown featuring alternately sculpted versions of Darth Vader, Luke Skywalker and Emperor Palpatine (who arrives seated in his Death Star II throne). As well, be on the lookout for Purchase of the Droids, which arrives with Luke Skywalker, C-3PO and the very first Uncle Owen figure (unfortunately, sans Aunt Beru).

If those weren't enough, slated for early 1998 release is a novel new concept pairing Princess Leia with several Trilogy companions in the 3 3/4-inch Princess Leia Collection, featuring all-new versions of Leia, complete with cloth costumes and partially rooted hair. The Princess will be teamed with either R2-D2, Wicket the Ewok, Bespin Han Solo or Ceremonial Luke Skywalker (the latter two arriving with nifty cloth jackets).

Also brand new is Kenner's Star Wars Complete Galaxy assortments. These feature highly-detailed planetary globes which can be rotated 360-degrees and open up (a la clamshell fashion) to reveal a signature 3 3/4-inch character inside! Luke on Tatooine, Princess Leia on the ice planet Hoth, Darth Vader and the Imperial Death Star, and Yoda and the swamp world Dagobah make up the assortment's initial launch.

In the already popular Star Wars Creature assortment, Kenner will continue to add to the line with the first quarter-slated Tauntaun with Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear (featuring nifty articulated knees), while the second quarter brings an all-new Wampa with Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear. Also in the second quarter, look for the Deluxe Creature assortment, which will include the first-ever Bantha with Tusken Raider (featuring bendable knees) and Rancor with Luke Skywalker.

Newly sculpted figures will also be offered in the brand-new Star Wars Battle Station assortment, projectile-firing fighter cockpits of familiar Star Wars vehicles. Early 1998 will see the release of Luke Skywalker with Falcon Gunner Station and Han Solo with Falcon Gunner Station (sold separately, of course), in addition to Darth Vader's TIE Fighter cockpit.

Kenner even goes back to its original X-Wing Fighter vehicle for a little revamping with the Electronic Power FX X-Wing Fighter, a newly sculpted version (it's sleeker and meaner, just like in the films) that features an array of lights and sounds from "Star Wars." Luke and R2-D2 are included.

Perhaps the most interesting news for collectors is Kenner's move to enlarge its toy offerings with Star Wars Expanded Universe, all-new vehicles and figures based on conceptual sketches from the likes of artists Ralph McQuarrie and Joe Johnston from the original Trilogy's pre-production art. Cloud Car with Pilot, Speeder Bike with Pilot and Airspeeder with Pilot inaugurate the Expanded Universe in the first quarter of 1998.

Also widening the scope of the Star Wars universe are new 5-inch Epic Force figures, versions of popular characters in classic movie stances, each with its own rotating collector's base which affords viewing the figure from all sides without even opening the box—sure to please those fans who frown at opening packages. Luke Skywalker (in Bespin fatigues), Darth Vader, Boba Fett and C-3PO launch the series, beginning in the first quarter of 1998.

In the 12-inch figure arena, large-size adaptations of Han Solo in Hoth Gear, Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear, AT-AT Driver, Grand Moff Tarkin and Sandtrooper (all previously available as halves of retailer exclusive two-packs), lead off early '98 releases which will also include a 12-inch Snowtrooper and Ceremonial Luke and small scale versions of Yoda, R2-D2 and a Jawa.

And for those collectors caught up in the mania of Beanie Babies, Kenner offers its answer to the trend in the form of Star Wars Buddies, soft cuddly versions of Chewbacca, Wicket, Yoda, Max Rebo, C-3PO, R2-D2, Salacious Crumb and Jabba the Hutt (go figure). ■ Scott Beatty

The first-ever Darth Vader with Removable Helmet is just one fan-favorite action figure Kenner has slated for 1998!

Lok Sivrak, the wolfman-like alien from the Mos Eisley Cantina joins Lando Calrissian in General's Gear in Kerner's 1998 Star Wars 3 3/4-inch assortments.

Princess Leia & R2-D2 features a much more collector-friendly version of Leia from "Star Wars," complete with cloth dress and hood.

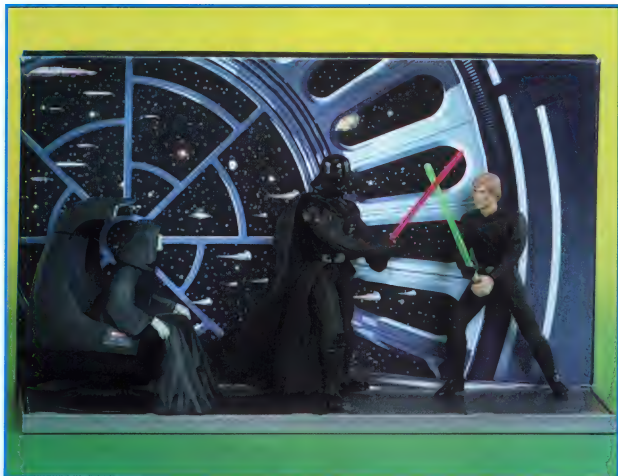

Princess Leia & Bespin Han Solo includes the first all-new Leia in Bespin Dress, plus Han with a nifty cloth coat.

Princess Leia & Luke Skywalker in Ceremonial Outfit features the first-ever Leia in Ceremonial Gown figure!

Princess Leia & Wicket offers up a keen cloth skirt variation of the Princess Leia in Ewok Celebration Outfit figure.

Kenner's latest Cinema Scene 3-Pack, Final Showdown, sports all-new sculpt of Luke and Vader, plus Emperor Palpatine and his Death Star throne!

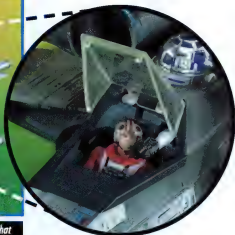

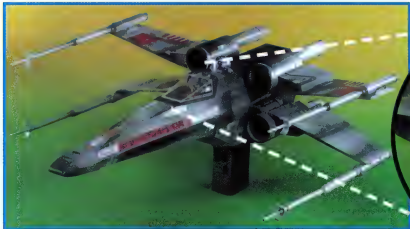

Han Solo with Falcon Gunner Station includes firing projectile launcher and an all-new likeness of Han Solo, complete with painted gloves and sculpted headset.

Yoda's TIE Fighter Gunner Station spins 360-degrees to re-enact that "Aw crap, I'm defeated" scene from "Star Wars."

Kenner's Expanded Universe Cloud Car and Airspeeder are based on original concept art from artists Ralph McQuarrie and Joe Johnston and include transforming features.

The Power FX X-Wing is sleeker, closer in looks to its movie counterpart and features sound and lights that literally re-enact the entire Death Star Attack scene from "Star Wars."

Han Solo and his Tauntaun are part of Kenner's 1998 additions to the popular Creature assortment.

The Complete Galaxy Tatooine globe opens to reveal a Luke Skywalker figure inside!

Move over, Tickle Me Elmo! The plush craze in 1998 belongs to Star Wars Buddies!

Kenner's 5-inch Epic Force Luke rotates on his collector's base to view the figure from all sides, without opening the packaging!

Like all figures in this new assortment, the Epic Force Vader is sculpted in a pose taken directly from the Star Wars Trilogy.

Not quite 12-inches (more likely half that), Kenner's Star Wars Small-Scale Action Collection offers up fully-poseable likenesses of Yoda, R2-D2 and Jawa (Utinni!).

Kenner's 12-inch Collector's Series adds the Sandtrooper and Grand Moff Tarkin (previously only available in separate retailer exclusive two-packs), plus Ceremonial Luke to the 1998 lineup.

Super Star Destroyer

SHIPS THAT MAKE YOU GO 'VROOM!'

Jeezum Crow, we almost forgot! Next year, Kenner's also serving up the Star Wars Landspeeder Chaser, a new remote-control vehicle that fits most Star Wars: Power of the Force action figures, and comes with its own nifty Imperial Shuttle controller (batteries, of course, are not included.)

Also on tap is the new Super Star Destroyer Collector Ship, with electronic lights and sounds and its own display stand (batteries, again, are not included...but you need four of those nifty "AA" batteries to make the jump to lightspeed.) TF

WITCHBLADE

Marc Silvestri had a problem.

As founder and head of Top Cow Comics, Silvestri felt that the time was right for Top Cow's hugely successful comic book series Witchblade to make the jump to action figures. But with nearly a dozen companies ready and willing to make figures for Top Cow, who should he choose? The answer was pretty simple.

When it came to lining up a company to create the figures, who better to capture the essence of the Witchblade characters than Clayburn Moore, sculptor and founder of Moore Action Collectibles, who's already hit the big time with his line of figures based on Chaos! Comics characters?

Choosing M.A.C. to create the Witchblade line was one of the easiest licensing decisions Silvestri has ever made. "Clay is one of those great combinations of talent and business savvy," Silvestri says. "We've done two sculptures with him already (including Moore Creations' popular Witchblade statue), and both are just phenomenal. Not to go to a sculptor of his caliber to make our toys—which we really want to make a splash with—would be ridiculous."

The decision made, Moore and his troops started designing the 6 1/4-inch action figures.

For Moore, the trick to the Witchblade toys turned out to be the challenge faced by millions of women daily: accessories. "Ian Nottingham carries a Japanese sword, and that's an easy accessory to fit to a character," Moore says. "But with Sara, we run into trouble. If it's possible, we'll do the Witchblade as a removable accessory, and do a human hand attachment that can hold Sara's gun—a police special .38. Or we could make the Witchblade slip over her hand."

Adding the Witchblade and other accessories to a female figure doesn't only create problems for Sara Pezzini, however. "We'll probably give Anne Bonny (a pirate Witchblade) a cutlass, and the Medieval Witchblade will have a battle-axe or a broadsword, something that she'd use before resorting to the Witchblade, since in the comic series [Spawn/Medieval Witchblade], she still wasn't too excited about using it."

Moore stresses that each Witchblade figure will be a completely new sculpt, highlighted by three completely different versions of the Witchblade weapon itself. "All three gloves have a very different look in the different books," Moore explains. "[Top Cow] gave the artists a lot of freedom in interpreting the glove for the different women, and as a result, each Witchblade represents something of the time period and personality of the wearer."

Along with accessories, Moore finds a particular challenge inherent in translating figures from page to figure. "I want to capture what the fans want to see," Moore stresses. "We're not going to be dictated to by Toys R Us or Target. We want to make the figures that the fans want to see. Like everything else we do, these figures will look just like the characters do in the comic books. We want to capture the essence of the character. Sara Pezzini wasn't designed to look like every other female character out there. She has her own distinctive look that we want to capture in the figure."

"The second series will be interesting," Moore continues. "We're looking at doing Kenneth Irons, who just missed the cut for the first assortment; and maybe Sara in her red dress with the Witchblade glove on. There are a lot of possibilities for the other two figures." Safe bets? Tora, the Microwave Murderer (Danette Boucher), Davin, Barak, Batair, or Kalliope (from Witchblade #16), or the future incarnation of Witchblade from Warren Ellis' upcoming Tales of the Witchblade storyline.

Silvestri isn't content to stop with Witchblade figures, however. Top Cow has an entire universe of characters who could make an easy transition from two to three dimensions. "It would be nice to see an action figure of all of our major characters, just so we could play with them," says Silvestri, whose only previous Top Cow toy endeavor to date involved Cyberforce 2-inch die-cast figures from Mattel. "Economically, though, we've got to make decisions based on factors other than what we'd like to play with."

With a "Witchblade" television series on the horizon and a number of other Top Cow projects being eyed for movies and animation, Silvestri feels that Witchblade and Top Cow are on the brink of making a huge splash in the mass market.

"The 'Witchblade' [television] series will put a lot of attention on the Witchblade toys," Silvestri says. "In the end, Witchblade and Top Cow will be household names. The Witchblade figures are a great way to start." TF

SPAWN: THE MOVIE PLAYSETS

Honey, I shrunk Spawn-Guy!

When you think big action figures, you probably imagine McFarlane Toys. After all, the company's 7-inch creatures and demons from the Spawn-verse easily tower over the plastic competition. But in the coming months, Spawn's gonna get knocked down a peg or two...right down to a petite four inches, to be exact.

What's going on here? McFarlane Toys is set to unveil the Spawn: The Movie Playsets, that's what! The figures in these sets—each of which recreate a key scene from the big-screen "Spawn" motion picture—will be even smaller than the mega-popular Todd McFarlane's Monsters playsets that inspired them. "We had to shrink the figures down because these movie sets are even more elaborate than the Monster sets," explains Ed Frank, co-president of the New Jersey-based McFarlane Toys Design Group. "We had to make them smaller to fit in with the scale and extra detail of the background sets."

Even though these figures are small, they're made for big fun. This assortment of three playsets is being released to celebrate the arrival of "Spawn: The Movie" to home video this December (though the playsets may not ship until January), so you can play along in front of the tube as Al Simmons is taunted by the Clown in the Graveyard playset, Spawn tussles with Violator in Spawn Alley or Violator makes one last surprise attack with the Final Battle playset.

Although "Spawn: The Movie" was released way back on August 1, these playsets were in development long before the undead anti-hero hit theaters across the country. "Dioramas are just more work than a normal line," Frank explains. "Regular figures can be done in six weeks to two months, but these took almost three months. It's a time-consuming process; they're very tedious. There's a lot of checking that has to be done along the way so we can make sure we're as true to the movie as possible."

While the playsets are indeed faithful to the movie, the design team had to improvise a little with the Graveyard playset. "We took some liberties to make the set more dramatic," Frank says. "Not that the movie wasn't dramatic, but they were able to use moody lighting and special effects. We had to translate that feel in three dimensions without those luxuries." To get that extra-creepy flavor, the Graveyard set is packed with all sorts of icky goodness. Aside from a taunting Clown figure and an Al Simmons figure in mid-Spawn transformation, the set features an open grave with the decaying body of Simmons, a ram's head with an ornate dagger and a shovel with the Clown's face on it.

Violator's all set to burst into your living room in the Final Battle Playset.

WHAT'S IN THE ASSORTMENT?

Graveyard Playset, Final Battle Playset and Spawn Alley Playset

WHEN?

Tentatively scheduled for January.

WHAT'S THE DEAL?

In the same vein as the Todd McFarlane's Monsters playsets, these detailed dioramas come packed with articulated 4-inch figures and tons o' goodies.

The Spawn Alley playset is a little more faithful to the movie—it comes with both a Spawn and full Violator figures as well as some assorted bits of debris. "It's packed with garbage cans and all sorts of junk," Frank says. "All kinds of stuff you'd find in an alley—pretty standard Spawn stuff." And to re-enact Spawn-Guy's slam-bang confrontation with the Violator, the Alley also has a pivoting crane and a chain-link fence from which to hang Spawn.

For the Final Battle playset, staying true to the movie made for some extra challenges. In the film, the Violator morphs out of Wanda and Terry Fitzgerald's living-room wall and sneaks up on Spawn, so recreating that particular digital effect was a unique challenge. "The toughest thing to do out of all of these sets was figuring out how to get the Violator's head and hands to morph into the wall," Frank says. "We had to make it roto-molded [a process for soft, pliable plastics] so the figure and appendages have the flexibility to move and still be part of the wall."

With all of the nifty extra details packed in, these Spawn movie playsets are sure to go over big with collectors and kids, even if Spawn is just a lil' guy this time around.

Nickelodeon's 'Action League Now!' rises above the average toy fare

They're heroes through and through.

They've sacrificed themselves time and again in the name of justice. They've gone on harrowing adventures that would've left lesser heroes cowering in a corner. They've battled the usual bad guys, big dogs and even a steamroller (they lost that battle). They've even guest-starred with KISS on the big screen, for pete's sake!

Still haven't heard of 'em?

Then maybe you should tune in to "Action League Now!," a popular segment of "KABLAM!," an anthology of witty, irreverent animation shorts airing Fridays and Saturdays on Nickelodeon.

Quirky and offbeat, "Action League Now!" features the stop-motion adventures of four bumbling action figure superheroes who seek to bring justice to their world—which happens to look a lot like an average American suburb.

But where did the Action League come from, and just what is the team's secret origin? It all started when Nickelodeon execs assigned producers Bob Mittenenthal and Will McRobb the task of developing a live-action short for a planned anthology series.

"We had to come up with a live-action cartoon," Mittenenthal says. "They said, 'We don't know what that means, but you guys figure it out and bring us a show.' The reason behind the live-action part of it probably was that they knew how much a [true] animated show would cost, and figured that live action would be a lot cheaper."

According to Mittenenthal, the idea for "Action League Now!" came to the duo when he and McRobb recalled their favorite toys as kids...and the evil things they did to 'em. "We played with action figures a lot," Mittenenthal says. "And we treated them as kids do, not as collectible figurines, but as toys. We ripped their clothes off, set them on fire and threw [the figures] into the street so cars would run over them."

"Since kids can treat their toys pretty roughly, we had the idea of [creating] a bunch of stories that were concocted by an 8-year-old kid who's watched too much television, and perhaps had eaten maybe a little too much sugar. Our goal was to approach these stories from an 8-year-old's level, and make each almost a stream-of-consciousness type of action/adventure where everything in the kid's world is incorporated into the story somehow."

With the basic concept hammered out, the producers developed the stories fairly quickly. "We came up with all these ideas for the shorts which were very cartoony in nature, but were live action and starred action figures instead of actors," Mittenenthal explains. "That's when 'Action League Now!' was born."

Starting out as a segment on Nickelodeon's "All That," "Action League Now!" soon moved to a new home when Mittenenthal, McRobb and another Nickelodeon producer, Chris Viscardi, created "KABLAM!," a half-hour sketch-comedy animated show presented in a comic book format.

"KABLAM!" is hosted by animated best friends Henry and June, and contains several fast-paced segments, including "Prometheus and Bob," which features an alien trying to educate an ignorant caveman and his pet monkey; "The Off-Beats," a segment about an outcast group of kids and their beat poet mentor; "Sniz and Fondue," a quirky pair of cats in perpetual pursuit of fun; "The Girl with Her Head Coming Off," which spotlights an imaginative young girl; and "Big Top," the tales of a ringmaster cat and his band of fifth-rate performers. "Watching 'KABLAM!' is like drinking water out of a fire hose," Mittenenthal says. "It's jam-packed with new looks, new characters and new ideas in animation."

Needless to say, "Action League Now!" fits in perfectly with its neighbors.

Combining the simple charm of the 1960s U.K. television series "Thunderbirds" (which featured puppet adventurers) with the off-beat, destructive humor of the "Saturday Night Live"-spawned Mr. Bill, and a liberal dose of the wacky "Pee Wee's Playhouse," "Action League Now!" quickly found an audience on Nickelodeon and has grown to be the breakout segment of "KABLAM!" Last summer, "ALN" was featured in its own theatrical short film shown before the Nick-produced movie "Good Burger." In the short, the League rescues the rock group KISS (appropriately played by McFarlane Toys' ultra-hot KISS figures) from the cranky infant doll Big Baby.

So who's in the Action League? Glad you asked. The League's roster includes the Flesh, a super-strong, super...uh...naked guy; Thundergirl, who flies like a Buick; Stinky Diver, the team's toilet-swimming commando with an odor that can stop a clock; and Meltman, a disfigured figure gifted with the less-than-cool ability to melt at will.

The "ALN" segments follow the adventures and misadventures of the quartet as they fight against villains such as the Mayor, Spotzilla, Robo-flesh and Big Baby. But these aren't just your typical cartoon-style battles, though. Characters are damaged, body parts are lost and plenty of stuff is just flat-out destroyed.

Along with the characters, there's another aspect to the show that adds to its appeal—the world where the Action League operates. "Literally, it's the suburbs," Mittenenthal says. "But it's an 8-year-old's view of the 'burbs—a world where anything and everything can take on another context. A kitchen turns into Big Kitchen National Park, the kitchen sink is the Sinkhole of Doom, and the garage becomes the Garage Dome Arena."

Along with the settings, anything and everything can be an integral part of the show. Thumbtacks with wires attached? Plug 'em into Meltman's head and you've got an experimental mind probe. And keep your eyes on regular household goods. Rolling pins? Toasters? Unfortunately, they tend to fall on our heroes at any given moment. With locations and props like those, it's easy to see how a trip to the kitchen can quickly become a life-or-death situation for the Action League.

Behind the scenes, Mittenenthal, who operates out of New York City, maintains a close relationship with production of the show in California. "While I'm not involved with the day-to-day production of the show, I am in touch with the director, Tim Hill, pretty much on a daily basis," Mittenenthal says. "When we realized all the day-to-day responsibilities of running a show like 'KABLAM!', we knew we needed somebody who could focus exclusively on 'Action League Now!' Tim and I have a long history of working together, and I knew he'd not only be good at directing 'ALN!', but writing it too."

With Mittenenthal and the rest of Nickelodeon in New York, and Hill on the West Coast, a trans-continental partnership was

But how does an episode of "Action League Now!" evolve from concept to completion? In the beginning, it's basically the germ of an idea: anything from turning the washing machine into the Cyclone of Peril to creating an opposite version of Meltman dubbed Frozen Jack. And where Mittenenthal is concerned, anything is fair game. "An idea will get batted around, and then a draft of the script will come in from Tim, and it will be revised a couple times over the course of a week."

Once the script is approved, storyboards are created, and the tale is revised once again—this time, for flow and pacing. "After the

Role Call

So who are the neighborhood's greatest heroes? They're more than just lumps of plastic, but plenty less than the great, and noble heroes they think they are. Currently, the Action League's roster includes the following unusual suspects:

THE FLESH

He's super-strong and super-naked! "He's not much of a mental powerhouse," Mittenenthal says. "He tries to help, but when it comes down to it, he's a few bricks shy of a load."

THUNDERGIRL

She flies like thunder! "She can actually fly, rather than just make loud jumps," Mittenenthal says. "But she doesn't fly that well. She flies into stuff, under stuff, through stuff, and that long hair keeps getting trashed."

STINKY DIVER

A former Navy commando with an attitude as bad as his odor, "He's sort of the mercenary of the group," Mittenenthal says. "He's got the advanced weaponry, super-cunning, and the mysterious background. Unfortunately, he's suspicious of everybody, and is kind of a misanthrope."

MELTMAN

With the power to...um...melt, "He's plagued with self-doubt and self-pity," Mittenenthal says. "This season he'll find out that he can melt at will, which in itself isn't a power that inspires great heroics."

storyboards are set, we have about a week of prepping, followed by a week of shooting," Mittenenthal says.

Filming basically takes place wherever Hill can find a good location: on constructed sets, in the middle of the street or even in someone's house! It all comes back to the 8-year-old's perspective. Everything has to look like it could be right next door, which keeps Hill pretty busy. "We've turned him an old man very quickly," Mittenenthal says. "He does have a team of animators and a very good director of photography, so everything is very professional, and Tim keeps things moving smoothly."

When shooting is all wrapped up, it's time for the whole shebang to head off for editing and post-production. "We usually have about two weeks of post-production work per episode, which is where we add voice-overs and other sound effects and edit it all together," Mittenenthal says. "So all in all, a segment of 'Action League Now!' can take a couple of months to produce."

And what about special effects? There's basically only one: "Chuckimation." Forget fancy-shmantzy digital dinosaurs. The idea behind Chuckimation is really simple. Just imagine an 8-year-old "chucking" (get it?) a toy in front of a rolling camera. The figure can land anywhere: in front of a car, in the toilet or even down the garbage disposal. It's not quite Industrial Light and Magic, but it works for the Action League.

But even with such cost-effective special effects, the Action League's weekly schedule is no small feat...even for superheroes. The secret, Mittenenthal explains, is simple: volume, volume, volume! "We do the segments in an assembly line fashion, so we can do 13 episodes, which is a full season for us, but it doesn't take 26 months," Mittenenthal says. "We'll write four episodes at a time, and then send those on [for filming] so we can start writing the next batch. There's always something going on. A season's worth of episodes actually takes us about nine months to produce."

"The process is pretty quick by the standards of traditional animation," Mittenenthal says. "Producing the episodes in batches rather than one at a time really cuts down on our production schedule as well."

And for those of you wondering what these toys actually were before they joined the Action League...keep wondering. While Stinky Diver may share certain similarities with some '80s-era 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joes from Hasbro, and Flesh bears an uncanny resemblance to folks in Mattel's Masters of the Universe line, don't expect Mittenenthal to come clean about who the Action League members originally were. That's between him and the show's uncredited toy supplier, Hasbro.

"Hasbro provides us with the figures, but I really don't even know exactly what toys they were before we got them," Mittenenthal says. "Hasbro is really good at altering the figures just enough so you think it may quite look like something you've seen before, but just can't put your finger on."

Watch out, Action League! Big Baby's on the loose!

Supporting Players

CHIEF

The League's intrepid, if curmudgeonly, leader. "He's there to yell at them, basically," Mittenenthal says. "He tells them what to do in a less-than-kind manner. He's certainly not the nurturing, touchy-feely type of boss."

SEE THIS TIE CLIPPY TOOK A MAN'S HEAD CLEAN OFF WITH IT ONCE.

LUNCHIE-MUNCHIEP?

JUSTICE

The trusty pooch that must accompany every super-team. "He's the Chief's dog," Mittenenthal says. "Everyone's got to have a dog."

And let's not forget two standard stock characters for any superhero adventure: the lovely headstrong reporter (think Lois Lane and you get the picture) and the absent-minded scientist (think exploding labs and monsters on the loose and you get the picture). Where would the Action League be without 'em? Meet the glue that holds the Action League together, such as it is:

REPORTER LESLIE ROGERS
She's the TV news anchor who's captured Stinky's heart.

PICK A PROCTOLOGIST JOKE--ANY PROCTOLOGIST JOKE.

THIS JUST IN--NIXON: STILL DEAD. HEE!

BILL THE LAB GUY
He's the Action League's gadget-maker. Highly intelligent. Highly ineffective.

Before last summer's "Good Burger," moviegoers caught the Action League saving McFarlane Toys' KISS figures from Big Baby.

Actually, most of the figures and toys we use were only released in Europe, so they can't be confused with the stuff that's on the market right now."

Mittenthal also says that Nickelodeon is very careful about having any figure used on the show cleared with the copyright holders, thus no one can claim that their figure or toy was maliciously destroyed on "Action League Now!" Translation: don't expect to see Grand Moff Tarkin ruling the Death Stereo with an iron fist, or find Wolverine meandering through the Morlock Air Conditioning Ducts in search of danger.

One thing Mittenthal is thankful for is that so far, the audience seems to be getting the jokes. With today's holier-than-thou moral majority atmosphere casting a dark cloud over kids' entertainment, no one's complained about the wanton destruction of toys. "We actually expected some people not to get the joke, but so far, it looks like everyone has," Mittenthal says. "We figure folks aren't complaining because the show is so clearly a parody. It's plain to see that everything we do is in good fun."

With the runaway success of the Action League, it's a safe bet that there's more on the way for "Action League Now!," including more movie shorts. "There aren't any firm plans right now, but everyone here at Nickelodeon was really pleased with what came out of that short, and they want to do more," Mittenthal says. "Producing it was a lot of fun, and it's definitely something that we want to do again."

Before the Action League heads back to the big screen, however, the team has the small screen to worry about. The second season of "KABLAM!" started this fall, and new Action League segments are in the process of being created. "We've definitely topped ourselves in making better, funnier and stupider Action Leagues than we ever have before," Mittenthal says. "One I'm especially proud of, which is probably one of the funniest we've ever done, is modestly called 'Science Fiction Parody.' Basically, visitors from outer space come on a mission of peace, and the Action League is assigned to act as their official guides to Earth. As you can probably imagine, the League makes the aliens so mad that they decide to destroy the Earth!"

And that's not all; the Action League's future keeps getting brighter and brighter. "We're going to do a half-hour 'Action League Now! Special' in January, and we're not quite sure yet what it will be about—in fact, if anybody out there has an idea, we'd love to hear it," Mittenthal laughs. "Two ideas we're tossing around are an origin episode, which I think our audience is dying to see, or an adventure where all the villains get together and try to put the League out of business for good."

What about after the special? Will the Action League land its own series? "That's what we hope will happen," Mittenthal says. "We're really hoping that the League gets its own show someday if the special goes over well. But we're going to take things one step at a time. We definitely see bigger and better things for the Action League in the future."

In the '70s, North Carolina-based freelancer Matthew Brady was also known as "The Flesh," but a night in the joint ended that little phase.

Greatest Hits

Some are epic, some are tragic, and some the Action League would just as soon you'd forget. Without further fuss, here are the finest moments in "Action League Now!" history:

10) "Testimony of Terror"

Stinky gets sucked into a documentary about sharks.

9) "Thunder & Lightning"

Thundergirl is visited by the ghost of her dead father, Thunderdad, who inspires her to seek out the "bottomless shrimp bowl" at Lightning Lady's house.

8) "Stink or Swim"

Stinky's reunion with his long-lost brother, Stench.

7) "Where Pigeons Dare"

Meltman's attempt at resuscitating a broken egg results in a sunny side-up nightmare.

6) "In the Belly of the Beast"

Meltman, confronted by the Mayor and his killer vacuum, takes the kind of action he's famous for: evasive.

5) "Robo-flesh"

Who's the real Flesh? The big stupid naked guy, or the big stupid naked guy with bolts sticking out of his neck?

4) "Rock a Big Baby" (seen theatrically with "Good Burger")

The League must save KISS's Gene Simmons from becoming Baby's newest pacifier. Thanks to Meltman's quick thinking, Simmons avoids a slimy demise.

3) "Nightmare on Memory Lane"

The team tries to cure Meltman's amnesia the old-fashioned way: severe head trauma with anything heavy.

2) "No Fly Zone"

Generic Boy and Generic Girl tear off the Mayor's limbs and beat him silly with them.

1) "Road to Ruin"

A game of Chicken between the Action League in the Action Mobile and the Mayor in a real car. Another victory for the automobile, another sad day for the Action League. ■ MP

New Mutants

TOY BIZ UNVEILS ITS UNCANNIEST X-MEN YET FOR 1998

By Scott Beatty

You can't keep a good mutant down.

Just ask the New York-based Toy Biz Inc., makers of all Marvel Comics superhero action figures since acquiring the company's master toy license in 1991. Propelled in large part by the Fox network's animated "X-Men" series on Saturday mornings, Toy Biz helped Marvel's biggest-selling franchise make the transition from the comics pages to the toy shelves. We dare you to count the number and variety of Wolverine action figures in every size and shape hanging from Toys R Us racks and adorning collectors' shelves over the last eight years. In the comics and on TV, the mutant X-Men fight to protect a world that hates and fears them. But for Toy Biz, the often misunderstood and frequently on-the-lam X-Men have been anything but trouble.

Recently, however, Fox's "X-Men" has ended production to enter syndication, which means there'll be no new episodes for mutant-hungry viewers. Does this spell the end of new action figure releases?

"As long as the X-Men are airing, they'll help us sell toys," says Toy Biz product manager Damon Nee, one of the principal architects of Marvel's mutant toy future.

Collectors can do the math. After all, what's better, an animated series seen weekly...or one possibly viewed as much as several times a day, each and every day of the week? For Marvel's signature mutant team, that's a whole lot more exposure than ever before.

And with a big-budget live-action "X-Men" feature film on the Hollywood horizon, a master toy license based on what would surely be a box office bonanza could be just the ticket to send X-mania into the stratosphere.

"A movie would help incredibly," Nee says, "but enough kids know the X-Men by now that they'll still look for the toys when they go to the toy aisles. The name itself is absolutely large enough to keep us going."

What has Toy Biz got in store for the X-Men in 1998? The following is just a smidgen of the stuff the company revealed to ToyFare following their pre-Toy Fair event in October.

SOMETHING OLD...

One direction the X-franchise is expanding in 1998 is with Toy Biz's debut offering of the New Mutants, based on the junior X-Men team that enjoyed great popularity in the 1980s before morphing into Marvel's current X-Force comics title.

Nostalgia for the characters, and perhaps a bit of interest bred from Marvel's recent New Mutants mini-series, helps add fuel to the fire for fan buzz on this assortment, aimed primarily at the ever-growing collector's market.

"New Mutants was something that I've been wanting to do forever," says product manager Carlos Lopez. "Unfortunately, we're only doing three figures in the assortment: Wolfsbane, Warlock and Magik. But they're just fantastic."

Marvel collectors may have already seen the recent retailer exclusive She-Force Wolfsbane, a creative re-deco of Toy Biz's Ninja Force Deathbird. But for New Mutants, forget about recycling old work—these figures are built from the ground up.

"Anybody who wants to see how Wolfsbane was truly meant to be can look here," says Lopez, who's confident that this line is a guaranteed success for X-fans.

"These characters really personify the expansion of the X-Men as a team and as a family. It's quite a coup for me to have done these—and I really got to do them the way I wanted to."

For New Mutants, expect realistic depictions of the so-called "X-Babies," from Magik's Soulsword and accompanying Lockheed figure to Wolfsbane's feral crouch and Warlock's techno-virus paint deco.

"All of the figures have play projectiles," Lopez says, "whether it's Wolfsbane's backpack or Lockheed's flame blast."

Mutant continuity-minded fans can look forward to Warlock looking a bit more like "Douglock," the recent amalgam of deceased New Mutants members Warlock and Doug Ramsey, with a Warlock mask to fit over Doug's head, and whose techno arm sports its own projectile launcher.

Banking on an even more retro feel is Toy Biz's planned release of yet another multi-figure boxed set based on the senior

In 1998, Toy Biz returns to the "Age of Apocalypse" to render the futuristic Omega and Jean Grey.

X-Men. Where 1997's Classic X-Men 5-pack featured Marvel's mutants (Cyclops, Angel, Marvel Girl, Beast and Iceman) in their debut costumes from the team's first appearance in X-Men #1, 1998 serves up an even six-pack based on writer Len Wein and artist Dave Cockrum's relaunch of the team with the legendary Giant-Size X-Men #1.

"We see what the collectors want, so it was a very easy decision to do this incarnation of the X-Men," says Damon Nee, product manager on the assortment.

And what the collectors have been clam-

X-Men: Then and Now

When Toy Biz first launched its line of Uncanny X-Men toys in 1991, the figures were cutting-edge, striking likenesses of Marvel Comics' ultra-popular mutant team with nifty action features to boot! But times change, and what was discriminating for one toy generation is sitting at the bottom of the toy box for the next. Since the debut of the first Uncanny X-Men, the Biz has gone back to the well several times, improving on their mutants time and again, step-pin' up to the plate in a major way. Here's a peek at how the debut X-Men measure up to their more contemporary counterparts:

ME WANT HAM SANDWICH! I LOATHE YOU. WHEE! I'M FLYIN'! WHEE! YOU SUCK BEYOND SUCK. APOCALYPSE THEN: Uncanny X-Men NOW: X-Men: Unslought	OH POOPY. ARCHANGEL THEN: Uncanny X-Men NOW: X-Men: Battle Brigade	LLLLLEET'S GET READY TO RRRRRUMBLE!!! COLOSSUS THEN: Uncanny X-Men NOW: X-Men: Battle Brigade

oring for are classic versions of the "international" X-Men: Sunfire, Banshee, Storm, Colossus, Nightcrawler and the short-lived Thunderbird, all rendered in their Dave Cockrum-designed costumes.

"We'll be using [Cockrum's] stuff for reference," Nee says, "but expect the sculptures to be edgier and a little hipper in terms of proportion and expression."

And that brings us to two issues that are ever the bones of contention for collectors: articulation and scale.

"The product manager makes the call on articulation," Nee says. Collectors looking forward to the new retro X-Men—as well as being fans of multi-point articulation—should take Nee's words to heart. "I'm a big fan of articulation, so any figures I work on have as much movement as possible: neck, shoulders, elbows, wrists, waist, hips, knees and ankles."

Where the hotly contested issue of scale is concerned, Lopez is quick to point out that Toy Biz's No. 1 goal is keeping its buyers happy. Translated: Characters who are runts in the comics ain't gonna tower over the bigger guys.

"It makes many collectors nuts. In our new collector-based lines especially, we're going to be concentrating on establishing scale," Lopez says. "That's going to be our focus now. If there's an assortment with Beast and Colossus and Jubilee, Colossus is obviously going to be bigger than Jubilee, Beast is obviously going to be broader than Colossus. There's going to be a lot more attention being paid to that kind of a detail within the collector's lines and the 5-inch [animation-based] figures."

BACK TO THE FUTURE

Even though Toy Biz is looking closely at fan-favorite adaptations of the X-Men for its 1998 assortments, don't think the company doesn't keep tabs on what's going on in the comics to mine toy ideas.

X-Men: Super Shooters

(Though Toy Biz won't reveal the exact nature of Super Shooters' play features [three guesses], the Biz is mighty proud of these guys.)

Apocalypse

Colossus

Wolverine

Beast

One concept to which Toy Biz will return next year is the popular "Age of Apocalypse" comics storyline from 1995, which ran through the entire stable of X-titles. Previously, Toy Biz adapted such "AOA" characters as Magneto, Sabretooth, Sugar Man, Wolverine, the Dark Beast and Holocaust, among others. This time around, look for AOA versions of Jean Grey and Omega (based on X-baddie Omega Red), the latter making only a brief appearance in an "Age of Apocalypse" spinoff title.

"The characters are just cool visuals. Jean Grey is forever classic. The Omega character's a little more vague. For kids and collectors, he's cool because they'll say, 'He was in the Age of Apocalypse! No way.' It'll be fun for fans to find his appearance."

—The ToyFare Staff

Perhaps most interesting about the new AOA figures are their bodies. Look familiar? While Jean and Omega's heads and accessories are entirely new sculptures, Toy Biz "borrowed" the bodies of Mystique (X-Men: Monster Armor) and Quark (X-Men: X-Force) for these new figures.

And don't be surprised if recent X-travaganzas like "Operation: Zero Tolerance" are co-opted for action figures. Current X-Men members Dr. Cecilia Reyes, Marrow and Maggott—who all joined following "Zero Tolerance"—are under consideration, though none are immediately planned for next year.

"We always keep in touch with [Marvel's X-Men editors] and what they're doing," we nag them to tell us exactly what's going on and who the new characters are so we can consider the toy possibilities," Lopez says.

As Toy Biz gears up for the X-Men assortments beyond its complement for 1998, don't be surprised if Toy Biz has even more classic X-characters in the works. For Lopez, his "wish list" of mutants he'd love to tackle in action figure form leans more toward the X-Men's roster of foes and supporting characters.

"I'd love to do the Hellfire Club—probably a collector's line with the original White Queen and possibly even the Black Queen Jean Grey. I've been dying to do an assortment of just civilians, like Candy Southern [Angel's old girlfriend]," he says.

Nee, on the other hand, would like to tackle some new Storm figures, harkening back to the character's "punk" days, in addition to some other high-profile mutant females.

"I want to do a Storm figure completely from scratch in her 'mohawk' days. Plus, I think [the Morlock leader] Callisto would be really cool—in the traditional costume with a switchblade and maybe some clip-on armor. [X-Force's] Stryx could be cool, too," Nee says.

And in addition to mining such ancillary characters as the New Mutants for material, Nee doesn't rule out Toy Biz looking to such mutant fodder as Alpha Flight, Excalibur or X-Force for action figure treatment.

"We do look at the comics," Nee says. "We're collectors of the toys, also, as well as being fans of the comics, so we know what's going on and we're looking at polls to see what the collectors want. If there is a demand for it, we'll do it."

"Actually, we were just talking about Alpha Flight yesterday," Lopez says. "I've been dying to do an Alpha Flight assortment and we're throwing that around. It all depends on how things like New Mutants are received."

Already on the docket for next year is a brand new assortment called X-Men: Super-Shooters, which features new versions of X-standbys Apocalypse, Wolverine (a veteran of many Toy Biz assortments), Colossus and Beast, described as the best adaptation of Hank McCoy to date.

"Colossus has the costume that was revealed in Uncanny X-Men #325," Nee says. "I'm also working on a Gambit and a Rogue with the costumes they wore recently when they were abducted by the Shi'ar Empire [Uncanny X-Men #341-#343]."

Toy Biz, however, is reluctant to go into any detail about the play pattern associated with Super-Shooters, preferring the element of surprise when these and other X-Men products are unveiled officially in February's International Toy Fair in New York City.

But as fans and collectors can see, even from just this sampling of action figures to whet the appetite, 1998 could well be one of the biggest mutant years ever for Toy Biz. The question is: Can the company top itself for 1999 and the dawn of the next millennium?

"Definitely," asserts Lopez. "We keep entering more universes, and there are plenty more to go."

TOY STORY

A LOOK
FIGURES FROM YEARS PAST

SHOGUN WARRIORS

SHOGUN WARRIORS JUST MAY BE THE COOLEST ACTION FIGURES EVER MADE.

Released in 1979 and targeted at 8-to-10-year-olds, the "Jumbo Machineders," as the largest set of Shogun Warriors toys were dubbed, stood at a whopping 2 feet tall! Star Wars figures were great and G.I. Joe was a blast, but Shogun Warriors were almost half as tall as the kids who played with 'em! Clearly, these robots were the biggest action figures ever to battle evil.

Shogun Warriors toys had been all the rage in Japan during the early 1970s as part of the "giant robot" craze that still exists, made famous by Go Nagai, the Japanese manga and anime illustrator credited for its genesis. In the early '70s, Nagai created the giant robot hero Mazinger (Mazinga in America) in manga form, and within a few years successfully translated it to Japanese TV anime. Its immense success created many imitators, as well as an extremely popular line of toys from Popy Toy.

By the late '70s, toy industry executives believed the Japanese giant robot phenomenon could invade the U.S. as easily as it had dominated its home country. American comics were created, cartoons like "Astro Boy" and "Battle of the Planets" were translated and dubbed, and plans were made to bring over the large volume of already-existing toys. Mattel stepped up and licensed the giant robot toys Popy had been producing for several years and released them as the Shogun Warriors, "Invincible Guardians of World Freedom!"

In the two years Mattel held the license, the company released dozens of Shogun figures in a variety of sizes, and attached such Japanese icons as Godzilla and Rodan (already popular in the U.S. with the dubbed monster flicks in which these creatures headlined). The initial assortment in 1979 included four of the colossal (by action figure standards) 24-inch Jumbo Machineders, six 3-inch "Collector's" series, and four 5-inch die-cast metal figures. The following year saw another 14 Shoguns, and over the life of the license 27 vehicles were released as well, for a total of 55 Shogun Warriors toys.

But that's only if you don't count the numerous variations known to exist. All of the Shogun toys were manufactured in Japan. However, in 1979 a Japanese labor strike made it difficult to keep up with demand and maintain the same level of quality the toys had previously enjoyed.

Faced with large U.S. orders but a greatly reduced workforce, the toy makers were forced to simplify subsequent releases of the toys to save money and time. The 24-inch Great Mazinga, for example, had a jet plane that docked in the top of the robot's head, and 14 firing missiles in its original form. By the third release, Mazinga's jet was locked into place and only 10 missiles were included.

It was also around this time that a 4-year-old boy choked to death on a missile fired from a Battletstar Galactica toy. Toy makers took a closer look at any kind of firing devices on their toys, and Mattel was no exception. Most of the smaller figures lost their missile-firing capability by their second or third release.

Although most of the Shoguns were released in both the U.S. and Japan, there were a few exceptions. The 24-inch Goldorak (also known as Grandizer in his 5-inch incarnation) was released only in Europe, making him the rarest of the large figures. Similarly, Rodan was the only Machineder not released in Japan. Add to that the fact that this character was produced in low quantities and is an extremely striking figure—especially by Godzilla fans' standards—and you have one of the rarest Shogun Warriors.

The four types of Shogun figures are most easily distinguished by their size: the 24-inch "Jumbo Machineders," the 3-inch "Collector's," the 5-inch metal action figures, and one other set appropriately dubbed "Two-in-One Shogun Warriors." These six figures were 5 1/2 inches tall and could transform into animals; Raydeen, for example, could become a bird. If this sounds familiar, bear in mind that the Transformers made their debut just a few years later in 1984.

By Dallas Middaugh

Marvel Comics' Shogun Warriors tried to ride the wave of giant-robot popularity.

As popular as the Shogun Warriors toys were, they didn't quite take off in America the way Mattel had hoped. Marvel Comics' Shogun Warriors comic book series lasted a scant 20 issues. And there never was a "Shogun Warriors" cartoon as such. For the 1980-81 TV season, American kids were treated to a daily animated show called "Force Five," which consisted of five separate anime shows from Japan. Each individual series was shown weekly, and all of them featured at least one of the giant Shogun Warriors robots. But by the time "Force Five" began, Mattel no longer held the rights to the Shogun Warriors and the toys disappeared from the shelves.

While Shogun Warriors didn't stick around very long, the toys had a lasting effect. Mattel had learned the value of having a toy line tied into a cartoon (and having both available to kids at the same time) and would exploit this concept in a big way in 1981 with its Masters of the Universe action figures, a tie-in to the "He-Man and the Masters of the Universe" animated series. Ironically, the giant robot craze that failed to take hold in America would later make its presence known through cartoons (and toys!) like "Voltron," "Transformers" and "GoBots," which owe a great deal of inspiration to Mattel's Shogun Warriors. And as excellent as those toys were then, the 24-inch Machineders remain unique to this day—no U.S. company has produced similar toys in the past 20 years. Incredibly stylish, impeccably detailed, and just waaay too much fun for a little kid, the Shogun Warriors remain some of the biggest, brightest, and yes, the coolest toys ever made. TF

CRAFTING YOUR OWN HOMEMADE ACTION FIGURES

FROM THE WAIST UP

By Chris Spaseff

Greetings, customizing crew! Hope you enjoyed last month's detour into horror figures. Now it's time to get back to business. Your figure should be coming along now with arms and legs customized. This month we'll work on your figure's torso and head, and it's also time to start applying armor if your creation requires it.

TORSO TUSSLE

Review your reference materials to determine exactly what details your figure's torso will require. Remember to closely follow the instructions on the Milliput and Super Sculpey packaging for best results.

Study the muscle structure and clothing details to determine how much modeling material is needed on your figure. Sometimes clothing and armor can be better duplicated with cloth or sheet styrene, a topic we'll cover in a future installment.

Start by getting the muscles or the preliminary build-up out of the way first and then take another pass at it, adding more material if your character has a smooth uniform or body texture. After each appli-

Ingredients

These are the supplies you'll need for this month's installment. If it's not available at your local hobby or craft store, we've noted another source.

1. X-Acto handle with #11 blades
2. Sandpaper in various grits: 80, 100, 150 (hardware store)
3. Sanding block (home improvement or beauty supply store)
4. Milliput or A/B epoxy
5. Super Sculpey
6. Dental tools
7. 16-gauge galvanized wire (hardware store)
8. Safety goggles (hardware store)
9. Heat gun or hair dryer (hardware store)
10. #10 screws (hardware store)
11. White Elmer's glue
12. Thin cardboard, styrene or balsa wood
13. RTV silicone (hardware store)
14. Toothpicks
15. Small dowels

cation, heat set or harden your modeling material using your heat gun or hair dryer. As always, remember not to get either your figure or putty too hot or you'll melt or burn your work. When sculpting near a leg or arm joint, make sure the full range of movement remains to keep your figure totally poseable.

HEAD OF THE CLASS

Creating heads for your figures can sometimes be the trickiest part of your custom modeling. The prototypes for the toys you find in stores are often sculpted at twice the size of the finished product. That's over 10 inches for a 5-inch figure, which makes it a little easier to sculpt fine details on the heads. When we customize figures, we don't have that luxury.

Know your subject; planning ahead by organizing references (like comic books) for characters like War-Bat (above) and Doom 2099 will make your customization a lot easier.

So when making a custom head, you'll sometimes need to make several attempts to get the perfect face.

You'll probably find it easier to sculpt over an existing head by adding a small amount of Super Sculpey to it. That'll make it easier to locate your character's eye sockets, nose, mouth, etc., without having to completely create the design from scratch. I find that when sculpting the fine details needed on faces, I have better luck when I wet my tools slightly and try to keep my hands as far away from the face as possible. While your hands are good for general smoothing, they can easily obliterate fine details on faces, so keeping some distance helps. If your figure has a mask, your work is quite a bit easier than actually having to sculpt your figure's eyes and such. Just grind down the hair or anything that will prevent you from getting a smooth finish and apply a glob of modeling material to smooth out and feather into the head.

This work-in-progress War-Bat from Detective Comics Annual #29 utilizes both Super Sculpey and wood to mimic armor.

Capturing Firelon's blazing 'do is as simple as "feathering" a little RTV silicone.

HAIR'S JOHNNY!

Just like in real life, hair comes in a variety of shapes and styles, and sometimes you'll have to make a weight-supporting armature to capture exceptionally long or flowing hair. Use some 16-gauge wire to make supports for the hair if you need to. This wire form can be covered with a thin coating of Milliput to create a very solid base to go over with some Super Sculpey.

Usually hair comes in two styles for action figures: smooth or textured. You will need to choose which one will more accurately represent the figure you're creating. Smooth hair is usually reserved for representations of animated characters, but feel free to experiment with different styles to nail down the perfect likeness.

Hair and other tentacle-like growths coming from the head can also be made using RTV silicone. I work slowly, applying a little bit at a time and letting the figure hang upside down by twisting a piece of wire around a No. 10 screw and threading it into the holes found in most action figures' feet. Feel free to anchor the top of the wire to something stable, like a desk lamp. The silicone also responds to heat from your hair dryer or heat gun and can be blown into shape. Using a spare hunk of wire to apply the silicone and pull out strands of hair works well.

FARMING ARMOR

Armor can be duplicated using several different techniques. One approach is to form the armor using your modeling material to bulk up the figure where armor is present. It's the easiest way, but it doesn't always produce the best effect if the armor is comprised of separate plates. Thin styrene or cardboard usually results in a more convincing look. If you heat the styrene gently you can form it to your figure's body, but remember that too much heat usually results in deformed parts. So work slowly and apply the heat sparingly. Cardboard can also be used and is easily formed to many shapes and curves. After you have the cardboard formed and glued onto your figure, brush several coats of white glue on each part to increase the strength and durability of the cardboard.

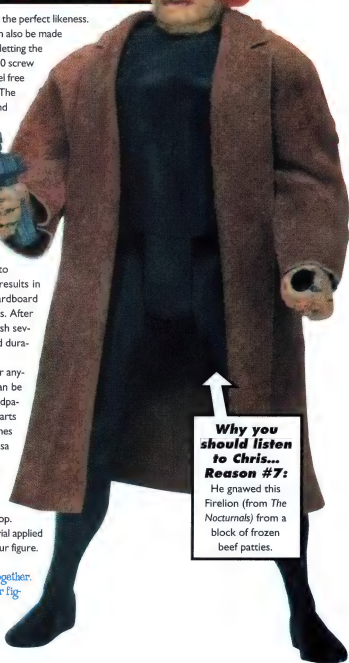

If your armor has various accoutrements like spikes, cables or anything else protruding from it, now's the time to add it. Spikes can be made from toothpicks, small dowels sharpened on a piece of sandpaper or—borrowing a technique from movie prop construction—parts from various plastic model kits. Details like fuel canisters, gun pouches and other knick-knacks can be small dowels, carved pieces of balsa wood or thin plywood (all available at your local hobby store).

Sometimes the perfect fuel canisters on a character's armor can be that muffler from your '69 Dodge Dart model kit. Cables can be small pieces of wire, thin rubber tubing or the miniature model car wires and cables available, again, at your local hobby shop. Sometimes various forms of armor will need some modeling material applied to the edges of your styrene or cardboard to amalgamate it to your figure.

By now, your custom figure should be seriously starting to come together. Next month I'll cover the wide world of paint, primer and decol. Your figure never had it so good! See you in 30. y'all

HOMEMADE HEROES

SPONSORED BY

THE REVERED RODEO OF FAN-MADE ACTION FIGURES

You read it in ToyFare #2—The “Make a Legionnaire” Legion of Super-Heroes contest. The mission: create the coolest homemade representations of the scads of wild ‘n’ wacky youngsters appearing in the pages of DC Comics’ Legion of Super-Heroes and Legionnaires. Now, the long-awaited conclusion: the winners of some seriously spectacular prizes from our good pals at DC.

One luckier-than-thou grand prize winner is gonna net a piece of original art specifically created for this here contest by Legion of Super-Heroes artist Ron Boyd. Whew. Think that’s all? Not a chance. That grand prize winner also scores a complete set of the hard-cover Legion of Super-Heroes Archives (Volumes 1-7) and the so-cool-it’s-hot official gold-plated Legion Flight Ring from DC Comics!

Four runners-up nab some nifty knickknacks as well. Each of ‘em will receive a set of re-launched Legion of Super-Heroes Universe books signed by the creators themselves (writer Mark Waid and artists Stuart Immonen and Ron Boyd on Legion of Super-Heroes #0, plus Legionnaires #0 signed by writer Mark Waid and artist Ron Boyd), Volume 7 of the hardcover Legion of Super-Heroes Archives and a Legion of Super-Heroes T-shirt. Jezzum crow!

HALL OF DEAD HEROES (top)

Brad Horning, Toronto, Ontario, Canada

Think this is all Brad could come up with? Not a chance. He sent in a good metric ton of cool characters, but we just ain’t got the space to show ‘em. With some Super Sculpey and sandpaper, a 10-inch Toy Biz Johnny Storm became Leviathan, a 5-inch Johnny turned into Kid Quantum, a Toy Biz Spinspot morphed into Atom’x and a Toy Biz Wizard was reborn as Blast-Off.

SENSOR (center)

Leslie & J.D. Hancock, Cedar Park, Tex.

Three feet of aluminum foil, a mound of Sculpey and some Mego Micronaut parts and you got yourself a Sensor! We received several versions of this serpentine supersnake, but this one topped ‘em all! Plus it kinda looks like she’s giving us the thumbs-up.

BARBIE’S LEGIONNAIRES (right)

Ryan Hipp, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Let those Aqua punks come up with a song about these Barbies! Most of the extras on these rooted-hair sensations were molded from clay. Way to go, Ryan! But your sister’s gonna be pissed when she finds out what you did with her dolls....

VALOR AND BRAINIAC 5 (below)

Michael Nowak, Boulder, Colo.

Like just about everyone who entered, Michael made wacky more figures than we can possibly show. Valor was made from Galoob's Ultraforce Hardcase with a cape he snagged from an Ultraforce Night Man. Brainiac 5 used to be a Toy Biz Mr. Fantastic figure, and Koko the funky monkey was a little plastic critter from a bag of zoo animals.

GRAND PRIZE WINNER

ASSORTED LEGIONNAIRES AND SUBSTITUTE HEROES (right)

Rafael Rodriguez, Coral Gables, Fla.

Sometimes the perfect contest comes along at the perfect time for the perfect guy. When Rafael opened ToyFare #2 and saw our Legion contest, he flipped—turns out for the past year he'd been slaving away creating his very own Legion, a total of 32 figures in all. Each one takes him between 10 and 12 hours, but he says it's worth it. "I love the Legion," he says. "It's the best book ever." Rafael's affection for the book dates back to 1973, when he first arrived in the U.S. from Cuba as a youngster. "It was one of the first things ever given to me when I got here," he says. "It was Superboy and the Legion of Super-Heroes #197. I just fell in love with it." He's been a Legion fan ever since. Well, get ready to add some swag to your Legion collection, Rafael. You've earned it!

HEY!

Think your stuff can stand up to this month's "Homemade Heroes" heavy-hitters? Flip to the "Homemade Heroes" contest on page 62, filled to the brim with Kick-butt booty you can win just by mutatin' your 'favorite characters into "Alien" beasties!

DARK HORSE PRESENTS:

THE ALIEN INFECTION HOMEMADE HEROES

All right, we all know Aliens take on the physical characteristics of their host bodies. Y'know, if an Alien infects a human, like in the first two "Alien" flicks, you get a humanoid Alien. If it infects a dog, like in "Alien³," you get a dog-like Alien. Get the idea? Great.

What you do:

Working with the "Alien takes on the physical properties of its host" theme, we want you to take some existing action figures and customize them into your very own hybrid superhero/Aliens. Like, what would the Alien look like that popped out of the chest of Galactus? Or Batman? Modok? How about a Lady Death Queen Alien? And remember, take multiple photos of your toy from different angles, pose 'em in cool positions and if you make packaging for them, shoot them in AND out of the package. AND NO POLAROIDs!

Grand Prize (1): One face-hugging winner will score ALL of the remastered Dark Horse Comics Aliens trade paperbacks, the Dark Horse Comics Alien Resurrection movie adaptation, the limited edition H.R. Giger lithograph "Pilot in Cockpit," an Alien³ resin kit, the Alien Trilogy videos, the entire Alien Resurrection action figure assortment from Kenner (Ripley, Call, Aqua Alien, Alien Warrior and Battle Scar Alien), and an "Alien Resurrection" movie poster!

First Prize (4): Four xenomorph lovers will win a limited edition H.R. Giger lithograph, the Dark Horse Comics Alien Resurrection movie adaptation, one of the figures from Kenner's Alien Resurrection action figure assortment and an "Alien Resurrection" movie poster.

Second Prize (20): Twenty bugging winners will win the Dark Horse Comics Alien Resurrection movie adaptation, one of the figures from Kenner's Alien Resurrection action figure assortment and an "Alien Resurrection" movie poster.

This month's contest is sponsored by Dark Horse Comics, lords of all things infectious!

Legal Face-Hugging

No purchase necessary. Contest is open to anyone except employees of Wizard Press, their immediate families and whoever green-lighted the script for "Alien." Here's hoping a safe lands on you. Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...

1. B'OMARR MONK (STAR WARS: POTF)

Ladies and gentlemen, your No. 1 toy this month is a floating brain. Attached to a robotic spider. Two great tastes that taste great together! Seems the Monk here (real name: Dave B'omarr) actually had a body once, but when he and his monk brethren reach the last level of spiritual enlightenment, they pop out their brains, toss 'em into a fishbowl full of Windex and cart 'em around in a big robot bug. Now that's a religion! No wonder Dave's No. 1 this month—that and he's one of them hot "exclusive" toys only available through Hasbro's Star Wars web site.

2. SAELT-MARAE (YAK FACE) (STAR WARS: POTF)

Once a super-rare figure available mostly in Europe and Canada in Kenner's 1985 Star Wars: Power of the Force line, ol' Saelt-Marae has finally arrived to conquer America as a brand-new POTF toy. With a solid decade of collector buzz behind him, this figure's hot. Wanna know how he got his nickname? Back in his college days, he and his buddies drove to the state fair while they snacked on marshmallow sandwiches and sucked down a keg of warm Blatz. Once Saelt-Marae stepped onto the Tilt-a-Whirl, Yak Face was born.

3. SNOWTROOPER (STAR WARS: POTF)

If Destro and Major Bludd pulled that old bag-of-flour-over-the-door trick on Cobra Commander, you'd get a Snowtrooper.

But that's about the only way you're going to get one.

Snowtrooper figures are scarcer'n a dry eye on "Party of Five"—we dare you to find one. There sure is a lot of fuss over this toy, especially considering that he looks like one of those Kleenex ghosts you made in elementary school every damn year on Halloween. Nothing sucks like a Kleenex ghost.

4. ROYAL GUARD (STAR WARS: POTF)

Elegant yet threatening, much like Vendela after a bottle of Old Crow, the Royal Guard makes for a fantastically cool-looking figure. Not that Vendela wouldn't. While the Stormtroopers were always cannon fodder, none of these scarlet sentries ever took one for the team. That's cool. We wonder what all the Royal Guards did for employment once Emperor Palpatine got chucked down a hole. Probably formed roving motorcycle gangs.

5. GAMORREAN GUARD (STAR WARS: POTF)

Just because someone's ugly, it doesn't always mean they're stupid. Or maybe it does. Maybe if you're stupid, you don't take care of yourself. If a Gamorrean Guard hit the dentist's office, showered regularly, lost a hundred pounds or so and got himself a couple of Versace suits, he'd be stylin'. And instead of squealing and trying to climb back up the chute in the Rancor pit, he would've stood behind the Jedi Knight. Duh. They sure are stupid. And ugly. And a new POTF figure, so they're selling out faster'n Blues Traveler.

7. GREEN ARROW (BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE)

Connor Hawke here is a member of the sweltering-hot comic book JLA. Huntress skulks around in the Bat-titles. So why's Huntress rank above GA? 'Cause she's of the female persuasion, that's why. Connor Hawke is blond. So's Ethan Hawke. Connor Hawke is in the Justice League, which used to be the Justice Society. Ethan Hawke was in "Dead Poets Society." Winona Ryder called Ethan Hawke a poser. Connor Hawke is unposeable. See the connection? Neither do we.

6. HUNTRESS (BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE)

Fact: Total Justice was a big flop. So how come the new Justice figures are ranking on our big Hot List? Simple. There aren't very many of the third TJ wave in existence. All starting to make sense now? Fact: On Earth-2, Huntress was the daughter of Batman and Catwoman. On the post-Crisis unified Earth, Huntress is the daughter of some mobster who got whacked. Robin knows her secret identity. Batman doesn't. What do you think the Bat-punishment will be for withholding information? A Bat-buttwhipping.

8. EMERALD TWILIGHT PARALLAX (BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE)

Hiya Hal! Haven't seen a figure of you since Toy Biz's 1989 DC Heroes line. What's new? Went nuts and died? That's cool. Like your cape. Hal Jordan was the best Green Lantern, but his ring couldn't affect anything yellow. That sucked. No matter what awesome ring creations Hal came up with, you could still beat him unconscious with the Yellow Pages.

9. BLACK LIGHTNING (BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE)

"Justice like lightning, should ever appear, to some men hope, to other men fear." So goes the legend of Jefferson Pierce, former Metropolis high school teacher with the power to expel bio-electrical charges in the battle against evildoers. The most poseable of the four Total Justice figures gracing our Top 10 List this month, he's also the lowest-ranked. Puzzled? Well, he's also the character with the lowest profile in current DC continuity, and he's not even wearing his current uniform. Sorry, Jeff.

10. HARLEY QUINN (ADVENTURES OF BATMAN & ROBIN)

Li'l Harley is one persistent toy! She's been in our Top 10 since our Spring Special Edition way back in early 1997! And know what? We still can't find her. Kenner needs to take a year off and make nothing but Harleys. America's in the midst of a Quinn craze—Harley is but one of many. Anthony Quinn. Aidan Quinn. Quinn Buckner. Quinn from MTV's "Daria." If anyone's listening, "Daria" action figures are a damn good idea. Oh, and betcha Harley's on our list again next month.

FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

HIS CRIME: The horror. This month's pariah, 339/1, is one of 18 Wrestling Champions figures by some generic company that doesn't even put its logo on the packaging. How lame are these toys? So lame they don't even name 'em, just give 'em serial numbers. So lame, they think putting your grandfather in wrestling trunks is a good idea. So lame, his right hand is melted. Imagine this freak of nature in a wrestling ring. Imagine this freak of nature under the tree on Christmas morning. Imagine the look of shocked disgust on a child's face after elatedly unwrapping 339/1. "Mother... Father... you have thrust me into a world of darkness. The penalty is death."

WHAT?!? WHO?!? HE SAID WHAT?!? THAT'S SELLING FOR HOW MUCH?!? WHEN?!?

THE POWER OF JUSTICE

By Lars Pearson

At Warner Bros. Justice was total and swift.

Most collectors knew the newest (and apparently final) Batman: Total Justice figures based on DC Comics characters would be hot, but the eye-popping sell-out rate of about two days was still incredible. The newest quartet, composed of Emerald Twilight Parallax, Green Arrow, the Huntress and Black Lightning, were mostly limited to Warner Bros. stores, and appearances in toy shops were spotty at best.

Demand was big because DC Comics has a fiercely loyal, if not overly huge, following, though there are few current action figure offerings based on the company's wealth of superhero characters. Collectors were ga-ga over such first-time figures as former Green Lantern Hal Jordan showing up in his evil persona Parallax and current Green Arrow Connor Hawke's debut rendering.

However, one can't ignore the advanced buzz among collectors, because these toys had that magic word: limited. With Total Justice discontinued, Kenner opted to produce more limited quantities on the third and final wave, a frequent practice among toy companies on line-ending assortments. Working from the magic formula of supply and demand, speculators believed that these limited toys would quickly shoot up in price.

As you read this, it could be very tough to get the figures at Warner Bros. studio stores, so if you're a DC toy fan, comic shops or the not-so-reliable Internet are probably your best bets. Unfortunately, a price bump seems almost inevitable. Retailers in particular will be knowledgeable about how rare these figures are and will increase prices accordingly.

TREK'S O'BRIEN: HOW RARE IS HE?

You'd think he was blood wine at a Klingon dinner party.

Collectors are rabidly trying to get their hands on the new "Trials and Tribble-ations" Chief O'Brien action figure, in an instance where perception jump-started reality.

Fact: Playmates announced that one of the figures from their newest Star Trek: Warp Factor Series I set would be short-packed—i.e. in such limited supply, most collectors should almost abandon hope of getting one.

Fact: Completists, those rascally devils who have to have every single toy, no matter how scarce, primed themselves for it.

Fact: Playmates wouldn't announce which one was scarce.

When the toys, all based on the "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" episode where the DS9 crew encounters the adorable but problematic Tribbles, arrived in stores, they seemed plentiful—except for Chief O'Brien. Collectors, fueled by the rumor mill, assumed that O'Brien was the scarce figure and heated, frothy mania ensued.

There were reports of O'Brien trading for an unreasonable and outlandish $900. Collectors kowtowed to toy store managers in the hopes of getting one. Nobody knew for certain O'Brien was THE ONE, but few took the chance.

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

Short-packed figures such as this have long been a source of wrath among collectors. It can draw attention to a certain line and boost sales, but it also tends to enrage completists who want every toy but don't want to spend hundreds of dollars on a rare gem. Remember the brouhaha over the "Tapestry" Captain Jean-Luc Picard action figure? Playmates released that figure as an incentive for collectors, releasing a scant 1,701 figures. It now goes for around $700, and the fallout from fans has been enormous.

Fortunately, Playmates' current policy is that no more short-packed figures will be released, meaning that as of Warp Factor Series 2, you can easily acquire all of them. As for the current scarce figure, be it O'Brien or not, Playmates says they've released 5,000 units and will release more in the same proportion—so the final tally will be comparatively tiny. Good luck.

HOT MONK-Y LOVE

He appeared in "Return of the Jedi" for about three seconds, but don't ignore the longevity of the B'omarr Monk.

Newly released, the spidery, brain-in-a-bottle B'omarr Monk is a hot Star Wars item for kinda obvious reasons—Star Wars popularity is HUGE. While other less-recent Kenner Star Wars figures move more slowly on toy store shelves, scarier figures like the exclusive Jedi Luke Theater Edition and the Frito Lay Spirit of Obi-Wan mail-away do big business, especially as Star Wars fans may be willing to shell out whatever it takes to complete their POTF2 runs.

And the same is true for the B'omarr Monk. However, collectors should realize that Kenner is making this figure available until the demand dries up. The company intends to continue producing the B'omarr Monk while its supply of orders lasts. Thus, the exclusive is not so limited—although, there is a cap of 50 figures per household. If you can hold out the six to eight weeks for delivery, you're in for a real treat, because this is perhaps the largest and keenest Star Wars exclusive Kenner has made to date. Just keep in mind, the offer expires January 31, 1998. For ordering info, just check out the Kenner website at <http://starwars.hasbro.com>. TF

ToyFare Price Guide Manager Lars Pearson knows a thing or two about monkey love. He's seen "Every Which Way but Loose" 127 times.

FIRST OFF...

The following 30-odd pages feature the Toyfare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To insure that it's the most best price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the it's buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

FINDING STUFF...

It's easy, unless you're a cantaloupe. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. "The Empire Strikes Back"), are posted alphabetically under the original movie title ("Star Wars"). When a title has been used several times for a different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Super," including "Super Amigos," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Superman Animated Series." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-B"—will appear at the top of each listing.

WHY TWO PRICES?

All first-column prices are values for unopened mint figures (MIP, or "Mint in Package"). Second-column prices are for loose mint figures (LM).

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with **.

WHAT'S WHAT...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

NOTE! Always keep in mind that with unopened toys, it's possible for the toy to have one grade and the packaging another. If a toy's unopened, it's most likely mint, barring toys that were flawed during production. But the packaging might have the tar whipped out of it, and grade in good or fair condition. Many ads will stipulate this, such as "unopened figure in good packaging." There's basically no way we can tell you how to adjust for every grading split—you'll just have to go with your gut and reach an arrangement with the buyer/seller. Got it? Good. Power to do men.

MINT (MIP or "Mint in Package") Packaging: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nuthin'. This condition is so smegging amazing, it's scarier than clothes on Madonna. Even new toys on the shelves aren't mint most of the time, so you might as well not worry about it. Stuff that is miraculously mint can fetch 125% to 150% of the MIP price depending on desirability and if it was made before 1990. Post-1990, it just fetches the MIP price. Figure: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can also fetch up to 125%-150% of MIP value—again, depending on desirability and if it was made pre-1990.

NEAR MINT (NM) Packaging: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIP value. Figure: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) Packaging: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-80% of MIP value. Figure: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) Packaging: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIP value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) Packaging: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) AND POOR (P) Packaging: Heavily torn/creased/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytails, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories. ■

Toy Fare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follows: Prices listed on the left are for mint-in-package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging; items not in any packaging (Loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a * means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

THE VAULT GUARDSMAN & DOCTOR DOOM Spider-Man: Techno Wars/Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)

We haven't even reached the end of the year and word is already coming out about Toy Biz's newest Marvel Comics-based lines for '98. One of the niftiest-sounding assortments is the Vault, based on the super-secret Marvel Universe prison complex. Each cell in the Vault is outfitted with special devices that neutralize a villain's power. Anywho, the new Toy Biz Vault line gathers together some of the most-requested villains—Ultron, Stegman and Typhoid Mary. Definitely looks like they'll be on everybody's must-buy list next year!

SPIDER-MAN & KRAVEN

Marvel Super Heroes 10-Inch Deluxe Figures (Toy Biz)

Some people call this particular version of everybody's favorite web-slinger "Halloween Mask Spidey." He's Peter Parker underneath his mask, but only the front half of his head is covered. All he needs is an elastic band to go around his noggin and a nice big shopping bag and Spidey's all set to go door-to-door for sweet treats. Regardless, we have to remember that these toys are really made for kids, and some young whippersnapper probably adores it. And then two years from now he'll try to flush it down the toilet.

ANNIHILUS

FANTASTIC FOUR (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Fantastic Four Annual #5 (Mar. 1968)

ORIGIN: Annihilus originated on Arctus, a barren volcanic planet in the Negative Zone.

Troopers from another world called Tyrannus crashed on the planet, releasing spores of bioengineered organisms. One of these spores grew and mutated into Annihilus, who created the Cosmic Control Rod from the remains of the Tyrannus starship. Annihilus used the rod to control the other lifeforms on Arctus, and quickly set out to conquer the rest of the Negative Zone.

CURRENT STATUS: Annihilus was last spotted screaming around in the Helios Nebula universe.

KEY MOMENT: Fantastic Four #251-#256 and Avengers #133. The FF explore the Negative Zone while Annihilus takes over the Baxter Building and tortures Alicia Masters and RT Franklin Richards. You know he's a baddie 'cause he breaths up on little kids and blind chicks.

BARON ZEMO

Marvel Super Heroes Secret Wars (Mattel)

Baron Zemo used to be a second-rate villain until his rep got a whole lot bigger with his high-profile gig as Citizen V, leader of the Thunderbolts. Fans itching for a Zemo figure have to make themselves happy with the version from Mattel's Secret Wars line, which is sadly out of scale with Toy Biz's Marvel line. We asked Jesse Falcon at the Biz if there's any chance for a Zemo in '98. "All I can say is that we think Baron Zemo's very cool. In fact, we like him so much we don't even want to talk about him."

MUG SHOT

BIB FORTUNA

STAR WARS POTIT (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Return of the Jedi" (1983)

ORIGIN: Jabba the Hutt's wretched, Bib Fortuna is a Twi'lek, an alien race from the planet Hoth. Fortuna became a trainer to his race, expiating the addictive chemical ryll to the Empire and selling his people to slavers. Cinnelg Jabba the Hutt caught wind of Fortuna's schemes and got him to facilitate a spice smuggling trade. Fortuna was able to run the operation successfully and worked his way up the ladder to become Jabba's right-hand man.

CURRENT STATUS: He's not clear if Bib Fortuna died when Jabba's sail barge was blown up. Supposedly, he made a break for it on his private skiff, but he hasn't been heard from since.

KEY MOMENT: Jabba the Hutt—Betrayal. Bib Fortuna's scheme to overthrow Jabba goes horribly awry in this Dark Horse comic.

BIG SHOT

DALE ARDEN, TWIKI & MING THE MERCILESS Flash Gordon (Playmates)/Buck Rogers in the 25th Century (Mego)

How the mighty have fallen. Flash Gordon used to be king of the hill as far as sci-fi heroes go. Back in the '30s and '40s his weekly movie serials attracted kids by the truckload. And those very same kids thrilled to his newspaper adventures in panoramic, full-page Sunday comics. But by the time the '80s rolled around, Flash was relegated to a campy flick. And the '90s are even worse. Last year, a new Flash cartoon premiered, with Flash as an extreme, skateboarding teenage barbarian. Thankfully, the cartoon, and alas the toy line, quickly disappeared.

BIG SHOT

ALTHOUGH THE MOVIE WAS A CREATIVE FAILURE, I BELIEVE MY ADDITION TO THE "BATMAN & ROBIN" CAST SHOWED THAT WOMEN CAN DO THEIR SHARE OF CRIMEFIGHTING AS WELL AS MEN CAN.

AREN'T YOU TOO FAT TO BE BATGIRL?

BATGIRL & PRIEST

Batman & Robin (Kenner/Spawn: The Movie (McFarlane Toys))

Never mind how much "Batman and Robin" sucked—the Batgirl figure has a cowl that Alicia Silverstone doesn't even wear onscreen. It turns out that it's based on the original Batgirl costume, which poor little Alicia-kins could not wear without pulling her hair out. The costume was changed at the last minute, but toys are generally designed while a film is still being produced. So, that's why this working costume of Batgirl was used, instead of the exposed-hair and Nightwing-esque mask from the film.

FIRST APPEARANCE: New Myxenta #5 (November 1983)
GIRL: Selene, the psychic vampire sorceress who would eventually become the Hellfire Club's Black Queen, has been around for several millennia. She accompanied the group of Romans who founded Nova Roma in the Amazon and founded the Club of Fire as its Black Priestess. In recent times, Selene traveled to New York, becoming part of the Hellfire Club's Inner Circle, where she quickly rose through the ranks to become the Black Queen.
CURRENT STATUS: The Black Queen is putting the Hellfire Club back together again, with the help of Sebastian Shaw, Madelyne Pryor and Fabian Carter.
KEY MOMENT: Uncanny X-Men #190-#191. NYC is turned into a prehistoric city ruled by the wizard Kulan Gath. Storm and the Marlock Callisto are forced into an alliance with Selene to return everything to normal.

DAREDEVIL & KINGPIN

Marvel Universe 10-Inch Deluxe Figures/Spider-Man Animated Series (Toy Biz)

Toy Biz makes some great toys and all, but every once in a while a real puzzler rolls down the line. Take this large-size version of Daredevil, for instance. Of Hornhead's original yellow-and-red costume was made before his traditional, all-red tags. What gives? We asked Jesse Falcon over at Toy Biz for an explanation. "We are doing the red costume, but we wanted to do the yellow suit as a nostalgia thing," he explained. Thanks for clearing that up, Jesse. What would we do without you?

CY-GOR

SPAWN (SERIES 4-MCFARLANE TOYS)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Spawn #28 (December 1995)

ORIGIN: Cy-Gor's a big monkey. Dr. Frederick Wilhelm, head of the Cybernetic Simian project wanted to create the perfect soldier by experimenting on apes, so he snatched up an ordinary gorilla with a human brain and a bunch of cybernetic daddies and created... Cy-Gor!

CURRENT STATUS: Who knows what's going on in Spawn nowadays? Let's just say that when Cy-Gor pops up again, you'll probably know. How can you not notice a giant friggin' ape?

KEY MOMENT: A bad guy who's half-monkey and half-robot is just plain ridiculous. A key moment in Cy-Gor's life is probably something as unexciting as finding a free cone of Ben & Jerry's Chunky Monkey Ice cream. Or maybe it was that time he decided to spend a whole week picking grubs off the back of his monkey pals in the zoo.

Star Wars: POTF II/Star Wars: POTF II Cinema
Scene 3-Packs (Kenner)

You've gotta give Kenner credit for its efforts to offer something new to fans who pick up the Star Wars Cinema Scene 3-Packs. Instead of just repackaging old figures, each set offers brand-new figures or reposed older ones. The Death Star Escape set, for instance, features an all-new pose to create a manacled Chewbacca, as well as Luke and Han in Stormtrooper disguise. With more packs on the way in '98, fans will be treated to all-new figures like Emperor Palpatine with his Death Star throne and Uncle Owen.

BIG SHOT

RAZA, BLOB & GORGON X-Men/X-Force/Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)

Congrats to Tom Potter of Huntington, N.Y. He's the winner of the "Make Your Own 'Big Shot'" contest in Toyfare #2. He gets his goofy word balloon printed here, and he also snags a complete set of Toyfare exclusive figures (Molten Man, Kitty Pryde, Bullseye, Firestorm and She-Hulk) and the prototypes for Malvey and Madrox the Multiple Man. And extra special kudos to Tom for avoiding the usual fart jokes that virtually every entry of the thousands we received cashed in on. Shame on you for making the Blob gassy.

MARVEL SUPER HEROES (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Amazing Tales #25 (August 1974)

ORIGIN: In an alternate world, army colonel Luther Manning was critically wounded by a concussion mine. His body was salvaged for a secret project that fused him with synthetic organs and cybernetic parts. With the codename Deathlok, Manning found that his new body possessed superhuman strength and augmented reflexes and abilities. Deathlok met up with some hippie-livin' vigilante named Goliath who sent him back in time to our reality.

CURRENT STATUS: When Marvel's Deathlok series ended, there were a while lotta other Deathloks running around. It looks like Manning hit the big one at the end of the story, but nobody really stays dead in comics. KEY MOMENT: Captain America #286-#288. In one of the coolest Cap stories ever, Manning's clone goes back in time to track down Deathlok.

BIG SHOT

TOTAL ARMOR RHINO, RHINO & RAMPAGING RHINO

Amazing Spider-Man/Spider-Man Animated Series/
Spider-Man: Web Traps (Toy Biz)

In quite a few recent assortments, Toy Biz has gone back and resculpted characters that have appeared before in older lines. Why has the Biz decided to do this instead of tackling characters that have never been done before? According to Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcon, the company's sculpting has improved quite a bit in the last few years. "We've learned a couple of things since then," Falcon says. "The guys we have working for us now can offer a lot more. We want to do these characters with a little more life and dynamism." Dynamism?

DESTRO

G.I. JOE: A REAL AMERICAN HERO (HASBRO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: G.I. Joe #14 (August 1965)
ORIGIN: Destro is the silver-masked leader of HARS (Military Armaments Research Systems), one of Cobra's chief suppliers of state-of-the-art weaponry. Little is known about his past, except that he dons his black mask as a family tradition. Although he most often allies himself with Cobra, he has been known to sell his wares to other terrorist groups occasionally. Destro desires to wrest control of Cobra from Cobra Commander, and he's also got the bats for that notorious feline foe, the Baroness.
CURRENT STATUS: G.I. Joe toys are back from Hasbro New Ventures, so there's a good chance Destro and the rest of the gang will be turning up on toy store shelves soon.
KEY MOMENT: G.I. Joe #16: Destro is almost killed in battle by the treachery of Cobra Commander.

BIG SHOT

MAN EATING COW & BLOB

The Tick (Bandai)/X-Men/X-Force (Toy Biz)

The Blob's got a squishy tummy. In the comics, the Blob is so fat that people who punch him can get caught in his massive bulk. Ick. Unfortunately (or fortunately, depending on how you look at it) Toy Biz was unable to faithfully reproduce this action feature. "The foam we sourced was too expensive," Jesse Falcon recalls. "I'm just happy we could do a Blob figure. It's so weird that we would just do a big fat guy in a wrestling suit. He kind of looks like that fat kid Cartman from 'South Park' all grown up."

EV-9D9

STAR WARS POT (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Return of the Jedi" (1983)

ORIGIN: EV-9D9 was the droid that oversaw all of the other droids employed in Jabba the Hutt's service. With her seductive attitude and no-

nonsense approach, she was frighteningly effective at her job deep in the bowels of Jabba's desert palace. Little is known about her history

except that she was the droid

responsible for assigning R2-D2 and C-3PO their jobs when they arrived at the criminal's palace. Take our word for it,

EV-9D9 is a female droid. You don't want to know we found that one

out. Trust us.

CINEMATIC STATUE: Presumably,

EV-9D9 wasn't on Jabba's soil

because when it exploded—she worked in the palace dungeons, after all.

KEY MOMENT: "Return of the Jedi." This droid's brief scene is one of the memorable moments in the final installment of the trilogy.

BIG SHOT

KISS (McFarlane Toys)

Everybody's going go-go over McFarlane Toys' KISS action figures, but you might not realize that Mega made its own set of KISS figs way back in 1978. Now do the new figures measure up? "The Mega ones are old, and that's fine if you wanted to take Gene Simmons' clothes off," says Chet Jacques, director of the McFarlane Toys Collector's Club. "Ours are action figures. They shoot things." It must be sort of a testament to KISS to have two action figure lines. There isn't even one Jerry Garcia figure. Hippies suck.

BIG SHOT

R2-D2

Star Wars: POTF II Electronic FX (Kenner)

Who doesn't dig toys that make little beeping or clicking noises? Whenever you're feeling down, you can just press your little Electronic FX R2-D2 and he'll chirp a little tune and brighten your day. Okay, maybe not everybody loves toys the same way, but there's no denying that sound chip toys are cool. Kenner's early plans for '98 don't include any figures with voice chips (aside from the Electronic FX X-Wing), but how cool would it be to have a Chewbacca figure that really growls or a Jawa that cries "Utinni"?

ILIA

TAR TREK: THE MOTION PICTURE (MEGA)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" (1979)
 Ilia's first appearance was as a Klingon Enterprise's crew when they encountered V'Ger, a mysterious alien craft on a destructive path through space. Apparently killed by the massive machine, Ilia returned as an android designed to be the eyes and ears of V'Ger.

CURRENT STATUS: The ersatz became part of V'Ger when it evolved to her plane. As a side note, before the "Star Trek" movie came out, there was a new "TV" series called "Star Trek: T.I.", with Ilia as part of the crew.

KEY MOMENT: "Star Trek: The Motion Picture." This build could only appear in the first Trek film. If you want one Paris Kiohama (the former Ms. Universe who played Ilia with hair, go rent the original "Megafaze," starring Barry Bostwick.

STORM, DARK NEMESIS & MYSTIQUE

X-Men: Robot Fighters/X-Men: Ninja Force/X-Men:
Monster Armor(Toy Biz)

Where's the beef? Aren't you glad you used Dial? How'd they cram in all that graham? Forget about those worthless quanderies—the real question that's burning into everybody's minds is how Toy Biz got the little sleazebag guy inside its nifty-lookin' Dark Nemesiss figure. Simple. It was insert-molded, which means that the piece was sculpted and plastic was poured around it to make a mold. The rest of Dark Nemesiss' body was cast in clear yellow plastic. And when the whole thing gets put together, you've got yourself one mean-lookin' action figure.

LT. STARBUCK

BATTLESTAR GALACTICA (THUNDERBOLTS)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Battlestar Galactica" premiere episode "Saga of a Star World" (Sept. 17, 1978)
ORIGIN: Lt. Starbuck, one of the best Viper pilots aboard the Battlestar Galactica, was orphaned as a young age when the Cylons attacked his hometown on the planet Caprica. Starbuck was played by actor Dick Benedict (real name Dick Hovland), who was also known for his role as Face in "The A-Team." He also miraculously cured himself of prostate cancer by following a mecabiotic diet. Way to go, Dick!

CURRENT STATUS: Reunited of "Battlestar Galactica" air occasionally on the Sci-Fi Channel.

KEY MOMENT: The Man with Nine Lives: Starbuck runs into Chameleon, an old con man played by Fred Astaire, who says he's his long-lost father.

BLACK SEA VENOM & SENTINEL TEST ROBOT Spider-Man: Web Splashers/X-Men: Water Wars (Toy Biz)

Water toys are fun. You'd have to be a commie-lovin' freak if you can honestly say that you've never splashed around with your action figures in the tub or 'thru 'em into puddles. This past year, Toy Biz has taken advantage of the inherent fun of romping around in water with its Spider-Man: Web Splashers and X-Men: Water Wars lines. "It's a safe way for kids to shoot at each other," says Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcor. "Incorporating water features into the toys expands the play arenas for our figures."

12-INCH ULTIMATE SUPERMAN, CONDUIT & DOOMSDAY Superman: Man of Steel (Kenner)

Who's the most recognizable superhero on Earth? It's gotta be Superman. Who's got the lamest rogues gallery in all of comicdom? Sadly, the answer again is poor Superman. Batman fights tough-as-nails villains like Two-Face and the Joker, but Superman gets stuck with pushovers like the Prankster and Toyman. And whenever somebody cool like Doomsday or Conduit comes along, they get killed off! If it's true that a hero is defined by his villains, then our boy in blue here has got a lot to be ashamed about.

MUG SHOT

STRONG GUY

X-MEN (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: New Mutants #29 (July 1985)
ORIGIN: When he first burst onto the scene, Strong Guy was called Guido. His job was to guard the sinky body of intergalactic rock star and thief Lord Camembert's former main squeeze! Lily Cheney. Guido eventually joined up with X-Factor and his decidedly non-P.C. colleagues. Guido was changed to the Strong Guy we know today. He's also a pretty good stand-up comedian. Ain't that spiffy? A guy who can crush you with his pinky and crack jokes at the same time.
CURRENT STATUS: Strong Guy is recovering from a heart attack with a pacemaker controlled by mutant gizmo-guy Factor.
KEY MOMENTS: X-Factor #107. Strong Guy takes on the Blob. "Wuff said."

BIG SHOT

TIGRA & DR. DOOM Marvel Hall of Fame: She-Force II/Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)

Tigra's got a hole drilled in her ass. Huh-huh. Regardless of the inherent humor of it! Tigra's cosmetic peculiarity, Toy Biz has made an effort to add a little something extra to its repainted action figures. Tigra, for example, used to be a Black Cat figure (from the Spider-Man: Spider Wars line) until a small length of plastic was added to make her tail. "We try to add stuff if possible," Toy Biz's Jesse Falcon says. "It's sometimes difficult to do, but we try because it adds a little something extra to the value."

BEANIE BABIES: CAN THEY STAY THE COURSE?

They're here, they're selling, but do they amount to a hill of beans?

That's the question retailers were asking themselves in October as the market for Beanie Babies, those adorable yet spineless critters made by the Ty company, underwent another change.

Some animals, such as Hoot the owl, Ally the alligator and Velvet the panther were retired, generating some interest among collectors and potentially higher prices. At the same time, five new Beanie Babies such as Gobbles the turkey and Batty the bat were introduced—again, titillating collectors. But the general public was rather ambivalent to these changes and it was that fact that left retailers not knowing the Beanie's long-term future.

On the one hand, sales remained very healthy, the line continued to diversify and more Beanie Babies accessories, such as sleeping bags, vests, jackets and wall displays, were making their way into the market, albeit selling so-so in comparison to the Beanie's themselves. Ty markets a few ancillary products such as Beanie clothing, but many of the products are made by different companies and consumer reaction is kinda ho-hum on stuff lacking a Ty label. Still, overall interest among the public and collectors remains strong.

But on the other hand, retailers feared a glut. Ty often makes big shipments to stores every 90 days, trickling the toys to stores in between, and October's big shipment means retailers could be reasonably flooded with Beanie's in anticipation of Christmas.

That's both good and bad. There's a fairly large group who realizes that all things being equal, it's often better to ignore the older, retired Beanie's and buy up the new offerings. After all, getting Beanie's at retail price is often better than buying them later when they're scarce or prices have been rightly or wrongly increased. Collectors had a minor feeding frenzy with the new Beanie's, and people with children used it as a good excuse to cheaply stockpile Beanie's for stocking stuffers, or to replace ones their kids had torn apart.

But many retailers realized that once past Christmas, the Beanie's will face their toughest challenge as collectibles. Last fall, the Sesame Street-based Tickle Me Elmo went for bushels of bucks, but supply finally met with demand, and Elmo has been both plentiful and affordable through most of 1997. Some retailers doubt the long-term sell-through of the Beanie's, and worry that further shipments from Ty will cause an "Elmo" effect. However, the line has more diversity than "Elmo," and the retirement of various Beanie's gives collectors something to chase after. It'll therefore be some time before it's known how much this fad continues to flourish. ■ Lars Pearson

MIGHTY MARVEL MADNESS

It's the greatest feeling in the world!

There I am, walking down the street, minding my own business; I pass a toy store and zowie—it's like being conked on the head with the hammer of Thor as my beady little eyes behold a window jam-packed with a gazillion Marvel character toys!

Spider-Man! The Incredible Hulk! Dr. Doom! Wolverine! Iron Man! The Silver Surfer! Daredevil! Captain America! I could go on and on—and you probably fear that I will—but there they are, the whole caboodle of Marvel's mightiest and most maniacal menage of costumed cavorters replicated in action figures, video games, coloring sets, party costumes, board games—you name it, they're selling it! Forsooth, it truly doth boggle the mind; especially when you've got an easily boggled mind like mine.

In ancient times, when Marvel was just a bopping and I was assaulting mankind with an endless outpouring of scripts (not easy to do when you're scratching them on the walls of caves), little did I, or any of the most talented staff of artists this side of a leaky inkwell, dream that one day the characters we were creating would actually be remembered, let alone be crowding the shelves and wall-spaces of the world's leading toy stores and novelty houses. In fact, let me give you the flip side of the whole tangled tale....

Every time I proposed one of the characters that were destined to become household names, hot-item toys and the best-selling comic book line of all time, all the "suits" hated each and every concept!

How well I remember the reaction of my long-ago publisher and his high-level brain trust, when I hit them with the idea of the Fantastic Four. "You want some ugly, ungrammatical brute called the Thing to be a hero??? And you want the team to argue with each other? Are you nuts, Lee? Heroes are supposed to be friendly, for chrissake!"

And I'll never forget the reaction when I proposed your friendly neighborhood wall-crawler. "Spider-Man? What kinda name is that? Everyone hates spiders! We won't sell a dozen copies! Whoa, you mean there's more? You want him to be what—a teenager? Now I know you've lost it! Teenagers can only be sidekicks; a hero's gotta be a grown-up adult!"

It goes on and on. Too bad I can't remember their exact words when I proposed the idea of a handicapped superhero who was totally blind, as well as a superhero who was always on the verge of death due to his bad heart, not to mention a gaggle of mutants that were hated and feared as much by the public as by their deadly enemies—but by now I suspect you get the idea.

Because they were such a hard sell in the beginning, maybe that's the reason it's so great to realize that the wild and wondrous inhabitants of the ever-unfolding Marvel Universe are now such an integral part of American culture. In fact, they're just as well-known, with as many fanatical fans, in such far-off places as Singapore, Spain and Saskatchewan as they are on Staten Island because, just like sports and music, comic book superheroes speak a universal language. That's why they're enjoyed by youngsters in every part of the globe, and the colorful, cleverly made toys fashioned after those characters help to perpetuate their legends and to preserve their popularity.

Whenever I see a young, wide-eyed Italian boy happily playing with a Wolverine action figure in Milan, or a dainty Asian girl lovingly holding her Sue Storm doll in Tokyo, I'm continually reminded of the amazing reach and influence of Marvel toys throughout the world.

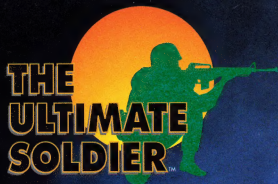

So count thee thy blessings, O True Believers. And harken to the joyous fact that today there be Marvel Comics! And where'er thou may findeth them, there too shalt thy grateful eyes behold—Marvel Toys as well!

Excelsior!
